ASUN loses over $23,000 on Jackson Browne show

By Joyce Hansen

The August 24 Jackson Browne concert lost about $23,816.56, give or take a couple of hundred dollars, Bill Johnson, director of special events, reported Wednesday.

The cost of moving the concert from outside to inside the LEC and the loss of concessions were the reasons for the loss, he said.

At the Senate meeting, Johnson also gave breakdowns on the America and Outfield concert losses. The America concert lost $6,700, he said, because the show had to be moved. It rained, and it ruined last minute walk-up sales.

"We should have made $20,000," he said.

The Outfield concert lost $3,300 after this show also was moved. It was during a holiday, school wasn't in session and there was a glut on the market, Johnson said.

In other concert news, as of Tuesday, 817 tickets for the September 14 UB-40 concert have been sold. That is 2240 short of the total amount needed

UNR is faced with a challenge, a challenge to respond to the growing demand for excellence put on it by the state. This was the message from President Joe Crowley in his State of the University Address in the Pine Room Wednesday.

"We have always been an institution that made a difference," Crowley said. "We are asked now to make a bigger difference."

He cited the increased enrollment, apparently the largest in the history of the university, as evidence of this challenge.

Also cited were the substantially increased appropriations provided by the legislature. "These funds carry with them expectations of performance in return," Crowley said.

In answer to this challenge Crowley said research funding at UNR has quadrupled in the last 10 years, citing the $3 million EPSCoR grant awarded to the University of Nevada system. From this money, UNR's chemistry and biochemistry departments will receive $1.6 million.

"Excellence is a word that describes us well," Crowley said referring to the fact that 70 percent of the 1986 veterinary science graduates were admitted to veterinary school, and all of the nursing graduates passed their licensing exams.

Crowley applauded the Affirmative Action Committee for its success in raising the number of minority members of the faculty.

"Of new faculty hired for 1985-86, 43 percent were women and 6 percent were minorities," he said.

Looking to the future, Crowley foresees problems created by the upcoming tax reform legislation, and proposed ways in which he plans on buffering the impact on faculty.

One such way is to move ahead with the program to provide interest-free loans of up to $2,000 to faculty members and staff to purchase personal computers and related materials, he said.

Crowley expressed his interpretation of the recent advertising campaign that has been visible on billboards around the city that read "Big enough to challenge. Small enough to care."

Crowley put emphasis on the second part of the slogan, drawing on his own experience as a college freshman and the problems he had.

"We are small enough to care, small enough to provide our students with a better experience than I had in those early years," he said.

Still looking to the future, Crowley made a point that the upcoming year brings the legislature into session again, and UNR must strive to get its new budget request through — a request he described as "ambitious" and "credible."

It is to be used for improvements in salary, staffing, graduate programs and other things around the university.

Crowley's main points

1. Looking toward largest enrollment figures ever.

4. Strengthen Affirmative Action.

2. Increased state appropriations.

5. Increased recruitment of Nevada high schools.

3. Research funding quadrupled in last 10 years

Prez gets a humanitarian honor

By Allison Bath

UNR President Joe Crowley was recently named recipient of the 1986 Humanitarian of the Year Award by the Northern Nevada Chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

NCCJ Executive Director Marsha Patinkin said Crowley was chosen from a field of many nominees because his work for the community and at UNR best exemplified the goals and aims of the NCCJ.

Crowley was honored along with Nevada Senator Thomas "Spike" Wilson at a $125-per-plate dinner attended by more than 300 people at Harrah's Reno.

Former Governor Mike O'Callahan, who presented Crowley with the award, said he thought Crowley was responsible for turning UNR into one of the finest institutions in this country.

Dan Klaich, Board of Regents Chairman and co-host of the dinner, said the history of UNR reflects periods of both small and great growth. He said he thought those periods in which UNR made great strides as an institution were due to the leadership of Crowley.

"UNR, under the direction of Crowley, (has grown) from what I call a state mandated institution into what I believe is a truly fine institution," Klaich said.

Klaich said he thought Crowley's "understated" ways and "high sense of moral rectitude" were the reasons for Crowley's outstanding leadership and his ability to maintain his commitment to the civil rights of his fellow man.

"Joe Crowley is an outstanding man, an outstanding scholar and an outstanding leader," he said.

Crowley, in accepting the award, said he was most appreciative of the award because he felt that organizations, such as the NCCJ, are what makes the U.S. great as a nation.

"It (the NCCJ) represents many of the things that makes us, as a country, strong," he said.

Crowley said the NCCJ promotes tolerance of different religions, ethnic backgrounds and races. He said that tolerance is what makes this country strong.

"Although we do stray from the path, we are a tolerant people," Crowley said. "And, we stand united, in my opinion, because we are tolerant."

Lack of fresh water killing Manzanita Lake

By Stephanie Metcalf

Lack of a fresh water source and lack of a circulation system seem to be the cause of Manzanita Lake's dirty appearance, Brian Whalen, director of the physical plant said.

The water from Manzanita Lake originates from the Truckee River, but before reaching the lake the water travels in tunnels under the streets to various communities and farmlands, Whalen said. By the time the water goes through Manzanita Lake and on to other communities it is sometimes very dirty.

Whalen said the reason the surface of Manzanita Lake is covered with moss is due to the lack of circulation. The warm weather and the lack of circulation system make the moss rise to the surface, but when it gets colder the moss should sink back to the bottom of the lake.

A few years ago, a 6-inch pipe was put into Manzanita Lake. The purpose of this pipe was to pump fresh water into the lake. The pipe runs from Orr Ditch, 3/4 of the way up the west side of the lake. This plan wasn't very successful because the pipe was too small and too flat, Whalen said.

"Manzanita is a huge lake for a 6-inch pipe," Whalen said. "It is like one drop of cream in a cup of coffee: it doesn't make much color."

Todd Plimpton, ASUN president, has recently organized an active group to make improvements on the lake. This group is planning to build a fountain pump from one end of the lake to the other. The whole idea is to circulate the water which will act as sort of a cleaning system, Whalen said. The group will start working on this project soon and it will take a year to complete.

In past years, various people have worked to beautify the lake's appearance.

In 1972 a new concrete storm drain was built to replace the old wooden one.

In 1978 a storm drain was built in Manzanita Lake to prevent overflows.

Past student groups have also organized efforts to clean up the lake.

— Art Kess, a former UNR student, organized a student group to clean up the north end of the lake. The group also built an island, now known as Kess Island.

In 1979 Juniper Hall residents built the walkway around Manzanita Lake.

Just recently in 1985, the buildings and grounds department put new river stones around the lake to minimize erosion.

And by the end of 1987 we should see the effects of Plimpton's plans for Manzanita Lake.

International affairs major offered at UNR

By Timothy Montgomery

It is now definite that UNR will offer a major in International Affairs.

After months of delay the board of Regents unanimously approved the beginning of an International Affairs major at their meeting on Aug. 28. The program will be directed through the Political Science department at UNR.

Dr. Richard Ganzel, program coordinator, has been awaiting this board decision following approval by the academic vice-president's committee earlier this spring. Ganzel, along with Diana Rebolledo, who is now director of Women's Studies at the University of Arizona, cooperated in the original conception of the program approximately three-and-a-half years ago. Ganzel has his Ph.D. in International Affairs from Claremont College in Southern California.

The program, which does not offer masters studies but does entail a 3 credit senior paper, has both a core and an advanced track option requiring 36-upper division credits, 16 in each section of the program. The core is made up of a selection of courses within the political science department, as well as others in the economics and history departments.

The program requires four semesters of a foreign language. Ganzel, however, advises that a student take more than just the two years. A working knowledge of at least one other culture's language and literature can benefit the student as well as those that come into contact with that student through the cultural information that can be shared.

Professor Don Driggs, chairman of the political science department, said, "The major was originally listed in the catalog.

"We continued to get inquiries through the summer," Driggs said. "until the program was pulled pending on the Board of Regents approval."

Driggs also said he was hoping to do more in the Far East. He is planning to recruit a full-time professor in Asian politics in the fall of 1988 which will enhance not only the International Affairs major program but the entire political science department as well.

There is no need to incorporate any new staff for the program since all of the core and option requirements are already available through schools on campus, Driggs and Ganzel said.

Regent JoAnn Sheerin was instrumental in convincing the board to implement approval of the major, Ganzel said.

The new program meets a need for international flavor, Sheerin added. The program will also provide a broad based education for students by combining disciplines.

Twelve to 15 students are working within the guidelines of the major program to date. Ganzel said he expects that within two years there will be as many as 50 students following the International Affairs program.

FIB winners, graffiti artists are losers

Winners — First Interstate Bank, for giving $100,000 to the Business College. Their generosity could establish a very good precedent for other members of the business community, showing them that there are some definite benefits from supporting education at the university level.

Losers — The individual, group or organization who put the graffiti on Sigma Nu's wall. It obviously came from the pages of Sagebrush and was an immature way to show the fraternity that graffiti is not accepted at all.

The editorial and cartoon in Tuesday's paper was intended to bring about discussion on the editorial page and inspire letters to the editor. When someone takes it as far as graffiti and vandalism, then all its worth is lost.

Winners — The UNR football team, for making believers out of just about everyone in the community.

The Pack wasn't picked to do as well as they did last year by most of the local sports fans, but they have proven thus far that they have just as much talent, if not as much skill, as last year's team.

Bryan Calder, Pack split end, should also get a special congratulations for being named the first Big Sky Player of the Week.

Losers — The City of Reno, for not considering where they were marking their residential parking areas.

It almost looks as though they had someone go and mark random curbs as being residential without rhyme or reason.

Right below Nye Hall has been roped off as residential parking, but now no one parks there. Every residence in that area has adequate driveway space, and the curbs closest to their houses are free parking anyway. The city may as well just paint the curb a red zone.

The administration keeps talking about building a parking lot up near Fleischmann Planetarium, with one shuttle bus to transport people to locations on campus. The only problem with that lot would be that one shuttle bus is not adequate. If you arrived 15 minutes before class, and happened to miss the bus, there would be no way you could walk to a class on the other side of campus in time.

Foreign language requirement is a must

I disagree strongly with Laura Hewitt's opinion in Tracy William's article in the last issue of the Sagebrush.

"I think foreign language should be an elective for those who aren't interested in using the language in the future," Hewitt said.

Ms. Hewitt, I think we may not get to choose whether or not will be interested in using a foreign language in the future. The world is, in fact, getting smaller and smaller professionally and personally, as Bonnie Martin, student coordinator of the College of Arts and Science, said.

Whether you like it or not, Reno is becoming more and more recognized internationally as a business center. That means more and more international visitors.

We have an international airport, a university, a Porsche plant (one of two in the United States), special events like the Reno National Championship Air Races, athletic events like the Coors Bicycle Classic, and other opportunities for international contact.

Look around the UNR campus and you will see several different cultures.

But maybe you think they should learn English because they are the visitors. Chances are they studied English in elementary school.

I think a lot of our international problems stem from an inability to communicate and an unwillingness to learn about another culture.

Because Europe is so small (West Germany, for example, could fit in Nevada 2½ times), it is necessary for Europeans to be open to different cultures. Not only do many Europeans study English, but they study at least one other language, as well as Latin or Greek.

They have to. They could be in a completely different culture in a matter of hours.

A person could drive from Stuttgart, West Germany to Paris, France in less time than it takes to drive from Reno to Los Angeles.

I realize learning a foreign language takes a great deal of time and effort, but so does skiing or playing the piano.

Kim Cummings

But learning a foreign language also provides opportunities to visit foreign countries and interact with the people. You get the benefits of talking to a different type of people and listening to different points of view.

Unfortunately, Ms. Hewitt, you hinted at the idea that Americans are not interested in knowing about anyone else but Americans.

Americans have the luxury of not needing to understand and tolerate a new culture or a new language once they drive over the border and into a new state. But I don't think that means Americans shouldn't try to understand other cultures across oceans.

I think a two-year language requirement is not a lot to ask of UNR students. If UNR students use this time to its fullest potential they may one day get opportunities to visit foreign countries or to work alongside and successfully communicate with someone from a foreign country.

We're powerful and we're intimidating. But we're not the only ones who share the earth.

Bess the cow seduces students

By Kim Cummings

Finally, a real celebrity on the UNR campus.

Bess, a 16-year-old Northern Holstein cow, appeared in front of JTU Wednesday to promote Wednesday's Steak and Lowenbrau picnic in Manzanita Bowl.

"It (the idea of having Bess appear) was a collaboration of some of the top minds on campus," Rich Garcia, director of public relations, said.

Garcia admitted he and Larry Rosborough, vice president of activities, were among the top minds involved in the operation.

Bess is probably best known for her appearance in the movie Top Secret (She was the one in galoshes), Garcia said.

She is also seen on the Eagle Brand Milk can, has appeared on the stage of John Asquaga's Nugget and is a distant relative of the Black Angus Restaurant cow, Garcia added.

Born in New England in 1970, Bess moved to Winnemucca where she lived until moving to the UNR dairy, Garcia said.

Her natural beauty and talent got her her first acting and modeling jobs, and now she appears in high schools and at public events across the country, Rosborough said.

"We called a few places up and they (the Dairy Club) said Bess would love to come out," Rosborough said.

"She's pretty mellow for a cow that size," Rosborough said.

Rosborough said he was unsure of Bess' actual weight, but he estimated her at 16,400 pounds and over 6 feet tall at the shoulders.

"Boy, she's big...very big," Rosborough said, his eyes widening behind his glasses.

Although Bess made a cameo appearance at the picnic, Rosborough assured that neither Bess nor any of her relatives would be the actual barbecue.

Bess has been limiting her public appearances a great deal in the past few years because she has been raising a family, Garcia said.

"As a matter of fact she's expecting her third calf, shortly," Garcia said.

Chalk one up for working mothers.

"Is that a cow? Linda Bennett, a 34-year-old nursing major, asked as she exited JTU.

By coincidence, several other passers-by asked the same question.

"People are so urban," Garcia said between yelling, "Come out and see the cow!" and handing out flyers publicizing the end-of-summer picnic.

"Moo," the black and white expectant mother agreed.

A conversation about bikes, Sunday's UB-40 show

The sound of UB-40 is certainly familiar to listeners of reggae, though hardly an imitation.

Since UB-40's inception in 1979, the band has distinguished itself with danceable, lilting tunes which, beneath the surface, give a darker message of socio-political protest and laments the condition of the British working class.

It's a potent combination.

Critics and fans alike have applauded UB-40 for its bright, catchy melodies and its political stances (each copy of UB-40's latest album Rat In The Kitchen, for example, contains a postcard addressed to P.W. Botha, President of South Africa, protesting "a worsening of the already grave situation in your country").

On Sunday night at 8 p.m. at Lawlor Events, UB-40 will perform with special guest Fine Young Cannibals, featuring lead singer Roland Gift, who has been compared by many to the legendary Otis Redding.

KOZZ DJ Harry Reynolds caught with UB-40 bass player Earl Falconer recently for a telephone interview. What follows is a transcript of their phone conversation. It is used by permission of KOZZ-FM 105.7 and Harry Reynolds, KOZZ-FM Station Manager.

Reynolds: How many times have you toured the states?

Falconer: This is our sixth tour. We've been coming to the states since 1980.

Reynolds: You do great in the metro areas. How do things go in the smaller towns like Reno for you?

Falconer: Well, you know, you usually get people who are into reggae, no matter where you go. So yeah, we usually get a good crowd at smaller venues. The tour has been the best yet.

Reynolds: A lot of people say, 'well, UB-40, I haven't heard of them.' To listen to someone describe UB-40 sounds like, 'It's reggae, but it's a little different.' They don't really have an exact way to describe your sound. How do you describe your sound?

Falconer: Well, we call it jazzed-up reggae, reggae from Jamaica, jazz because it's like, very brassy sounding. Also the way we put our brass lines together has a lot to do with our sound. And 'dubbed' because of the way that reggae is used by our record's producer to change the music through effects echoes. So, it's a jazzed-up reggae which is like, I suppose, different from your normal Jamaican reggae.

Reynolds: It seems that a lot of bands seem to shift sounds once they've established themselves; maybe they go for the more commercial sound. From what I can tell, UB-40 has held true to the way things started out. Do you agree with that or have you talked about changing your sound for more commercial reasons.

Falconer: When we go into the studio we usually jam, get numbers together that way. There isn't any one writer so we all put our own little beat in. It's continued that way although we have gotten into technology a bit more by using computers. We still basically do it the same way, though. And like the point you made about going commercial, and commerciality—we don't really think about that, I mean, in putting the music together. It's only at the end, like when you choose the single, for instance, where you think, 'Oh yeah, this will be more appealing than the others.' We just make music firstly to please ourselves; as long as everybody's happy in the band, that's what we're basically after.

Reynolds: That seems like the way you guys do it. I haven't gotten any overt 'commercial' feel to you guys. It seems like you are trying to please yourselves first and then worry about if anybody likes you after that. You're probably been asked this a lot, but 'Red, Red Wine,' the Neil Diamond song, I read something one time that you didn't even know Neil Diamond

UB-40 gives a powerful political message

By Mark Fenske

Rat In The Kitchen UB-40 A&M Records ★★☆☆

Rat In The Kitchen is UB-40's fifth and possibly strongest release in the eight-year history of the reggae band from Birmingham, England.

This eight-piece band has put together a gem of uplifting reggae rhythms with rich, bright melodies. It's music with a fun, cheerful sound that is also magically relaxing.

Beneath this bright and reposed sound, however, lies the potent, sharp lyrics of UB-40. Lyrics with somber messages relating to such subjects as the socio-political problems of the British working class and the complications of human rights and world hunger.

This combination of soothing melodies and biting lyrics is an intense one. Many references are made to the turmoil in South Africa in the songs "Tell it like it is" and "Sing our own song".

The plight of the British working class is apparent in "All I want to do" and "The Elevator".

The ugly reality of world starvation is described in the song "Don't blame me". The overall lyrical mood of the album is one of anger, bitterness and protest.

If the lyrics aren't enough to raise people's consciousness of the issues, every copy of Rat In The Kitchen has enclosed a post card addressed to P.W. Botha, President of South Africa, protesting "a worsening of the already grave situation" in his country.

Also is attached another card with which listeners may make donations or become part of Amnesty International.

The driving rhythms of the drums, percussion and bass, and the clever melodies of the keyboards and horns make this album candy to the reggae ear.

The brothers Robin and Ali Cambell of the band add in the completing elements of soothing vocals and consoling guitar rhythms.

In addition to this strong eight-piece instrumental lineup is Herb Albert playing a solid and enjoyable guest trumpet in the song "Rat in me kitchen".

Rat In The Kitchen is a must for anyone who appreciates really good reggae with strong, discerning lyrics.

did it when you started doing it and then found out afterward it was a Neil Diamond tune. Is that true?

Falconer: Well, like it or not, it's the type of question in interviews where you tell people it's something you used to listen to when you were younger. And 'Red, Red Wine' we thought that was done by a guy named Tony, a Jamaican artist, and that was the first time we heard the song. It wasn't until we actually recorded it, and found out the publishing rights, that we found out it was Neil Diamond. And we were shocked!

Reynolds: I thought that might set you back a bit.

Falconer: Yeah, we were really surprised that, you know, we thought it was this geezer from Jamaica that did it.

Reynolds: That's interesting, because Neil Diamond is going to be here in Reno on the 20th of this month, and...

Falconer: Yeah, well I heard rumors he might pop up at one of the shows, you know.

Reynolds: Really?

Falconer: Yeah (laughs)

Reynolds: That's interesting

Falconer: Yeah, right (laughs).

Reynolds: (laughs) very interesting.
Falconer: I'm really looking forward to coming to San Francisco because I'm really into the all-terrain riding. You know, bikes. I bought my bike on tour, and it's like a mountain bike. And, Marin County is like the birthplace of it all so I'm looking forward to coming down there.

to break even, Johnson said.

"This total would cover maximum production costs and building costs, but (if we sell) over 2,500 to 2,800, we should do just fine," he said. "I'd be happy with that."

He said 150 tickets were sold Monday and 170 sold Tuesday.

"Things are picking up," he said.

ASUN would consider canceling U-B-40 if only 1,700 to 2,000 tickets are sold, Johnson said. ASUN is counting on last minute walk-up sales to hike up the total sold.

"They have killer walk-up sales," Johnson said. "If we decide (to cancel) and they (UB-40) don't want to, we'll lose $12,500. If they agree to cancel with us, we'll lose $4,000-the cost of advertising."

In other business, the senate voted unanimously to make senior citizens attending UNR full-time members of ASUN, enabling them to attend sporting events and other ASUN activities. They can also be on ASUN boards and committees.

Also, senators voted to open filing for a nursing senator. Applications can be picked up in the ASUN office in JTU.

Creative Alternatives to Traditional Teaching Tools.

Kinko's Publishing Group has many innovative services available to help instructors keep educational class materials as specific and up-to-date as possible.

Professor Publishing is a service whereby any legally reproducible supplementary class materials such as study guides, reading selections and other topical information can be quickly copied and bound so that each student has a personal copy of the material (a great alternative to the library reserve room).

There is no cost to the instructor or department and students pay pennies a page for the copies.

Kinko's Copyright Permissions Assistance Office functions as the go-between for educators and copyright holders in providing copyrighted materials for classroom use. In this capacity, Kinko's can assist in obtaining permission to reproduce articles, journals, or out-of-print books for your students, handling the production and any necessary royalties. Kinko's Reprint Service is pursuing reprints arrangements with many educational publishers to allow quicker access in providing copyrighted materials for the classroom.

Intramurals director seeks women players

By Richard Alexander

Intramural Sports Director Lee Newell said he is expecting increased participation by UNR students this year and hopes to see women's participation improve.

"Last year we had the biggest intramural sports participation this school has ever had," said Newell, who has been the director at UNR since 1963. "We had big turnouts in everything."

Last year there were 186 people who participated in table tennis. Intramural golf had 68 players. Basketball also proved to be popular, with 75 teams.

According to Newell, team sports are the most popular. Basketball and flag football have the biggest numbers. Table tennis and racquetball are the individual sports that have the highest turnout.

Informing the students is important. Newell notifies the fraternities and sororities through mail. He also has bulletins posted in the dormitories.

Right now, student response is better than expected. One problem is that everyone waits until the last minute to turn in entries.

"We try to put leagues of eight teams, which allow each team to play seven times," Newell said. "We want to accommodate everybody — do the sports and try to do them at convenient times."

An aspect of intramural sports that Newell would like to see improvement in is participation by women.

"We don't get the girls out in the kind of numbers we want," said Newell, who said he thinks the lack of participation is caused because women have not played sports as much as men.

Lee Newell

Some sports have been dropped by Newell such as bowling and gymnastics. He said bowling was too expensive and gymnastics was dropped because high school programs aren't very strong.

However, he does try to organize special events, including an intramural rodeo that is tentatively scheduled for November.

Newell has received support from ASUN.

"We've had a nice, working relationship with ASUN," he said. "They've really helped us out."

ASUN gives intramurals a $10,000 per semester budget to pay for equipment and officials.

Entries for co-ed volleyball and tube water polo are due Sept. 25. Competition in each begins Sept. 30

Entries for flag football are due Sept. 9 and play begins Sept. 15.

Golf entries are due Sept. 26 and play begins Oct. 5. Bicycle race entries are due Sept. 24. Play begins Sept. 28.

Crazy Georges lead UNR fans

It's great to see student participation up at UNR football games.

The Wolf Pack cheerleaders, mascots and the Wild Wolves deserve the credit for making the games fun on and off the field.

The cheerleaders have a microphone this year and now can effectively lead the crowd in chants, songs and the wave.

They also are more mobile, running into the stands and up and down the field, keeping spectators on their toes.

More men have joined the cheerleading ranks this year. Assistant athletic director Anne Hope, who had the idea, said men can usually get the crowd to yell easier than women can.

And she's right. The result of all these cheerleading changes has been a boost in crowd morale at football games.

Freeman substituted for one of the cheerleaders during the past two football games.

Wolf mascot Larry Rosborough has been joined by Caroline Henningson as the female Wolf. The combination has provided entertainment for all kinds of spectators.

Henningson has encountered some interesting comments since becoming the scantily clad blond Wolf.

"She realizes that she's going to get teased," Hope said. "She's meant to be a flashy item out on the field."

The Wild Wolves, no doubt, have been the hit of the football games. The tall, blond guy is Jimmy Rippingham and the short, brown-haired guy is Steve Schiller.

The Wild Wolves arouse the crowd with measurements on their "Thundermeter" and by awarding enthusiastic fans with Wild Wolves T-shirts.

"They're like another version of Crazy George," athletic director assistant Billy Allen said. "Except there are two of them."

Crazy George, now with the Minnesota Vikings, is a nutty guy with goofy hair who was a fixture at Oakland A's games a few years back. He did crazy stuff that kept the fans going during lulls in the action.

This huge campaign, initiated to provide more support and thus revenue for UNR athletics, comes under the ominous title "Blue Thunder."

That's the only problem. It sounds like the helicopter on TV.

Two other major contributions to the campaign should also be mentioned.

The first is the marching band's play before and during the games. People pick on the band but those same people stomp their feet to the beat when the band's on a roll.

The second is the student tailgate party before last weekend's game. It was well received and should be continued if possible.

Not just sororities and fraternities were involved. It was all students of all sizes, shapes and colors. That's the spirit UNR athletics should provoke.

Volleyballers take shape

By Ward Farrell

The UNR women's volleyball team took 13th place last weekend at the UC-Davis tournament.

The Wolf Pack competed against 32 teams, and still finished in the upper rankings of the tournament.

"We had a good finish," coach Lane Murry said. "Only two teams in our playoff bracket finished higher than we did."

According to Murray, the Pack is just beginning to take shape.

"Kari Zimmerman and Sharon O'Connell were our two big hitters and blockers last weekend," she said. "Beth Briand and Lisa Geddes were our two best defensive players."

This weekend UNR will travel to the Cal-Berkeley Invitational. Its schedule for the tournament starts with a match with host Cal-Berkeley at 1 p.m. on Friday. UNR's 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. matches will be against Cal State-Fullerton and Portland State respectively.

UNR split sets with the defending Division II national champions last weekend in Davis.

"We will face all tough teams this weekend," Murray said. "Portland State is Division II champion, Sacramento State is in the top five in Division II and Santa Clara beat us twice last season. We definitely have our work cut out for us."

Saturday's matches are against

Sacramento State at 1:30 p.m. and Santa Clara at 6 p.m.

According to Murray, the Pack should show improvement over last week's tournament.

"I feel that we are learning every time we get into the gym," Murray said. "We videotaped last week's tournament, and have been looking at it this week. It will help the team because I can yell something to the players, but until they see for themselves what they are doing right and wrong, they realize their mistakes."

The Pack will be without the services of one of its setters this weekend. Christine Byer is out of the lineup with an ankle injury.

Following this weekend's competition, UNR's next match will be against Northern Colorado on Sept. 18.

Bob Brown named

UNR offensive lineman Bob Brown was also named to the All-Rockies team in Street & Smith's College Yearbook.

Sagebrush reported in its last issue that just quarterback Eric Beavers and placekicker Marty Zendejas had made the team.

Brown was a first-team All-Big Sky performer for the Wolf Pack last season.

CC women at Sacramento race

By Kelli DuFresne

Upset that Sacramento State did not come to UNR's Cross Country Carnival last weekend, coach Tony Melody travels with his Wolf Pack team to the Sacramento State Invitational Saturday.

"I'm upset that Sac. State didn't come up," Melody said. "We've spanked their butts before. They didn't want to be spanked again. Now we'll spank them on their home course."

"This will be our second in a row. Then we go to Fresno to 'tap dance' on their course — show our stuff."

UNR will compete against 10 to 12 schools including Boise State, Fresno State, Cal State-Hayward, UC-Davis, San Jose State, Chico State and Northern Arizona University.

"If NAU and Boise are there it's going to be tough," Melody said. "But we will definitely give the top dog a run for their money. I'm not really worried about Fresno because I think we have better quality athletes."

Melody said that the flatter course at Sierra College will allow UNR to come in as more of a group. Because of this and the size of the meet he said that the people separating the UNR runners will be from a bunch of other schools instead of one giving UNR a good chance of winning, even if it doesn't have the fastest times.

"The course is not really all flat," Melody said. "It has golf-course-type hills, nothing like we have here."

"We will run a little better as far as being tighter as a group. I'll be very surprised if the top four aren't between 17:30 and 17:45. That's where they are right now. I assume the next five will be between 18:00 and 18:30. If we do that we will be flying high."

"We have the talent. We need that mental stability."

Because Patty Young (first place finisher in UNR's meet last weekend) showed up from summer vacation in race condition and the other top runners showed up in good shape, as the season advances the team will become a tighter group.

"The rest of the girls will be getting closer and closer to Patty," Melody said. "Eventually they will all be

Golf coach recruits foreigners

By Robert Willis

The long-distance telephone bill at UNR may have increased during the summer.

And many of the calls can be traced to the office of golf coach John Legarza.

But that doesn't necessarily mean AT&T is going to be the only one to benefit from those recruiting calls.

Joining returning foreigners Steve Watson of Canada and Robert Willis of Australia will be two more Canadians, a Scotchman and a Norwegian.

"If everything falls into place we'll be tougher than last year," Legarza said. "The new guys have given us added depth."

Watson, the 1986 Big Sky Champion and Willis, the runner-up to Watson, will join Eddie Travis as the returning starters in a team which won four of 11 tournaments last season.

Also returning from last year's squad will be redshirt freshman Jeff Anderson and senior Alan Bluhme.

The new faces in the Wolf Pack lineup include no freshmen but six players with junior college experience.

Dan Dupius of British Columbia, Canada, Lionel Kunka also of British Columbia and Rod Butler of Centralia, Wash., join the Pack squad after playing their freshman seasons in the Washington Junior College League.

The foreign connecton continues with Greggor Hannah of Scotland and

Wolf Pack leads Sky in numbers game

By Geoff Schumacher

The final tally is far from in, but it seems that UNR is dominating the Big Sky Conference — statistically speaking that is.

Senior quarterback Eric Beavers leads the league after two games with a 67.86 pass-completion percentage.

He has completed 38-of-56 passes for 618 yards, seven touchdowns and one interception for 198.2 rating points.

Sophomore fullback Charvez Foger leads the league in rushing with 198 yards on 32 carries for a 6.2 per run average. He has also scored three touchdowns.

Foger's 84 yards against Sam Houston State last weekend snapped his regular-season 100-yards per game streak at eight.

Halfback Lucius Floyd is fifth in the Big Sky with 103 yards on 15 carries for a 6.9 per run average.

Senior Bryan Calder leads the league in pass receptions with 16 for 235 yards and three touchdowns. He was named the Big Sky's Offensive Player of the Week for his 13 receptions for 200 yards against Sam Houston State.

Senior defensive back Joe Peterson has two interceptions in two games to lead the Big Sky. He is the only Pack defensive player to intercept a pass.

Bret Dales is fourth in the league in punting, averaging 41.5 yards per punt after 10 punts. The three punters ahead of him have played one game this season.

Punt returner Brian Kaskie is third in the Big Sky in his specialty, averaging 7.83 yards per return after six returns.

UNR was picked second in the Division I-AA national preseason poll behind Georgia Southern. The regular

The spaces Legarza mentioned were left vacant by the departure of seniors Mark Gilmartin and Robert Icban, both of whom were members of the team which won the Big Sky title. Also missing will be Rodney Wilson, who played a contributing role throughout last season.

The Pack has defeated Cal State-Fullerton 49-3 and Sam Houston State 35-7 in its two opening home games. Opponents have yet to score in the second half.

UNR has this weekend off to prepare for its Big Sky opener Saturday at Mackay Stadium against Montana. Game time is 1 p.m.

The two victories put coach Chris Ault's UNR record at 83-35-1 in his 11th season. That's a .702 winning percentage.

The Pack was 11-2 last season and reached the Division I-AA semifinals before losing 35-12 to Furman.

Inside linebacker Kent Donithan was nominated for Big Sky Defensive Player of the Week for his five tackles in the Sam Houston State game but the honor went to cornerback DuJuan Robinson of Northern Arizona.
