Parking officer angry with chief

By Geoff Schumacher

A former UNR parking official said Wednesday she resigned because Department of Public Safety Director Larry Bizzari stripped her of any authority and she was forced to work 14-hour days because her department was understaffed.

Robbie Johnstone, who submitted her resignation effective Oct. 29 as parking office manager, had worked for the department for 10 months and the state for more than nine years.

"When the new chief came on, everything changed drastically," Johnstone said. "It was just fine when Ray Wedmore was there."

Bizzari replaced Wedmore July 1 as UNR's police chief.

Johnstone said Bizzari "took over" the running of the parking department when he arrived.

"I had no authority — he took over the (ticket) appeals," she said. "How could he make those decisions when he didn't know what he was talking about?"

Johnstone said during fall parking-sticker registration her department was understaffed. She said she constantly requested more help of Bizzari.

"I'd come within sight and he'd say 'No!' before I got a chance to say anything," she said. "I worked from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. during those times. That's a real strain when you are a single parent with three kids and one is handicapped."

Bizzari said he is unable to talk about Johnstone's comments because she has filed a claim with the state of Nevada against Bizzari's department.

Richard Kishpaugh, who was a UNR police officer for five years and a lieutenant the last two, also resigned recently.

Kishpaugh said he decided to take a job with his father's contracting business because he no longer wanted the responsibility of overseeing an underfunded, understaffed police force.

"The officers were put in a dangerous situation and I didn't want the responsibility," he said. "I started seeing a liability problem. I had a responsibility for something I couldn't control."

Kishpaugh said Bizzari brought a different style of law enforcement management to UNR.

"He's a tough-minded manager," he said. "He feels people should know he's the boss. My style is different than Larry's."

Bizzari commented on the recent resignations and acknowledged discontent of some officers on the force this way:

"Yes, there are disgruntled people in the department. Some people are resistant to change. When one is allowed to operate under a certain management style it is hard for them to change to a new management style."

Bizzari said Kishpaugh left the department under "very good circumstances."

He agreed that his and Kishpaugh's styles of management were opposite.

"There is no doubt that is true," he said.

Kishpaugh said in an interview Sunday that he disagreed with many of Bizzari's policy changes.

He said he thought the moving of shotguns from under the front seat of the police vehicles to the trunk endangered the officer's safety.

"If they are in the trunk it restricts you somewhat," he said.

Bizzari said the shotguns were removed because they were not being used properly.

"They were used when it was not appropriate," Bizzari said. "The circumstances did not warrant them being drawn."

Kishpaugh also disagreed with Bizzari's order that no longer allowed officers to carry tape recorders.

"It would be better to have them," he said. "They are a good tool. By not allowing recorders, you are chipping away at the things an officer has to protect himself against civil liability. It also helps in writing reports."

Bizzari said he discontinued the recorder's use because it was being "surreptitiously used for other things not germane to an officer's use on the street."

Kishpaugh said he thought the disbanding of the Special Emergency Response Team (SERT) had a lot to do with administrative pressure.

"I did feel that if the team was properly understood, it was a good thing," he said. "But I didn't balk at its removal."

Said Bizzari: "The powers that be did not order me in any way, shape or form to disband the SERT team or make any other decision."

ASUN vote: 38 Special or bust

By Loni Ellicegui

The ASUN Senate voted Wednesday to sponsor 38 Special and Bad Company in concert at Lawlor Events Center on Nov. 15.

Vice President of Activities Larry Rosborough said, "It's going to be really, really big."

Special Events Director Bill Johnson said ASUN must sell 4,475 tickets to break even on the $69,355 venture. Johnson said ASUN will receive 100 percent of the profit from the first 799 tickets sold after this break-even point. This would make ASUN approximately $12,000.

If the concert is a sellout, ASUN stands to gain about $20,000.

"I think it is something that will make us money," Johnson said. "I think it appeals to the majority of the market. We are hard and southern rockers. I think this a winner for us."

ASUN Business Manager Gary Brown said there are no certain winners in the concert business, but he thinks "it would be good."

Johnson said 38 Special has sold out recently in Dayton, Ohio and Charlotte, North Carolina. He said

Skills improved by counseling workshops

By Roxle Taft

The UNR Counseling Center is offering a Wednesday night series on relationship skills, starting Oct. 8 and running through Oct. 29.

The discussion groups will be at White Pine Hall, main lounge, from 7-8:30 p.m. and are open to all UNR students, faculty and staff.

Pat Lewis, coordinator of the Relationship Skills series, defines a relationship as "an on-going, close interaction with someone who matters in your life: a friend, a lover, a loved one."

The purpose of the series is to "consider and to practice alternative ways of relating to one another, which will lead to more satisfying relationships."

Topics include reaching out, getting closer, staying together, and letting go, which Lewis says are all part of the relationship process.

"It is not a therapy group; we are not there for counseling," Lewis said.

The format will be information-giving, using "structured experiences to explore techniques to improve communication and clarify meaning; learn what to do about difference; devise ways to increase the rewards of a relationship, and weed out irrational ideas which prevent successful relationships."

The Relationship Skills series, which is starting its fifth year, has seven main objectives:

- to increase accuracy in listening to and responding with another.
- to express feelings more freely with one another and to accept responsibility for your own feelings.
- to clarify expectations and roles of each of you, as partners or friends.
- to discard irrational ideas or behaviors that prevent you from successfully relating.
- to resolve conflicts (fight fair) in ways that bring more understanding and closeness.
- to be able to ask for what you want, accepting that "No" is not a rejection of you.
- to be aware when your relationship needs adjusting "for a better fit."

"The most potent way to change a person's behavior is to change yourself," Lewis said.

MSA geared to minorities

By Ilene Martinez

The Minority Student Affairs department played host to an ice breaker last week for the minority students attending UNR.

The program was informative and successful in not only introducing minority students to each other but to the services, departments and organizations geared to help the minority student achieve his education goals, Fabiola Chavez, director of Minority Student Affairs, said.

Chavez said she is aware that there are many minority students who did not know of or could not attend the ice breaker.

She said she is mailing newsletters out three times a semester and wants the UNR students to know about the department and the network of information that is available.

"This department is for all American minorities, or anyone who wishes to use our services, including, senior citizens, the handicapped and women," Chavez said.

Chavez said that the purpose of her department is to recruit, retain and advance the minority students at UNR.

"The recruitment of students begins at the high-school level as well as the level of the mature student who wishes to return to school," Chavez said. "I go to career fairs and other areas to let people know about the programs available to the minority student so that they can attend UNR."

Some of the services available at the Minority Student Affairs department are counseling, financial aid counseling and scholarship advisement.

Workshops will also be conducted throughout the semester, Chavez said. Some of these workshops will include resume preparation classes, how to interview for jobs and group self-esteem workshops.

The Minority Student Affairs department is located in the Mackay Science building, Room 204, or call 784-4936.

Upward Bound helps motivation

By Cynthia Lowery

If you need an on-campus job, or are interested in a career in education, the Upward Bound program can help.

Upward Bound is a national education program designed to help high-school students improve their academic skills and motivation.

Students eligible for this program attend study sessions on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays at UNR during which they are tutored by UNR students.

"You must be a junior, senior, or graduate student to be a tutor," Connie Capurro, director of the service since 1984, said. "You must also present recommendations in your field of expertise and possess at least a 2.5 GPA."

Tutors are paid $5.50 an hour, and many become teaching assistants during the summer session of the Upward Bound program.

"They also act as chaperones on our field trips," Capurro said. "We usually travel to northern California to compete with other students in academic contests."

According to Capurro, a good tutor

UNRPD boss denies campus rape rumors

By Alan Moore

After Sunday's arrest by the UNR police of a second suspected sexual assailant, Chief Larry Bizzari has again denied the existence of a campus-area rapist.

"No. We do not have a rapist running around this campus," Bizzari said.

His remarks came after the arrest Sunday night of 26-year-old Paul A. Skinner of Reno, suspected of breaking into campus area residences to take money and fondle sleeping women. He is under investigation for burglary, prowling and attempted sexual assault.

Bizzari called the sex charge a "misnomer."

"We presume that he intended to commit the assault," he said. "But we have to prove it."

With Skinner, police have only a man who fits the description of one who, in separate incidents, has been seen leaving a restroom with a woman's purse, who has broken into rooms to take money and who has broken in and touched a woman before being frightened away, Bizzari said.

"We're going to pursue it, but I'm not sure if that's enough to charge someone with sexual assault," he said.

Skinner's arrest is the second of its kind in less than a month. On Sept. 21, a Cold Springs man was arrested by Reno police in connection with what Reno Police Department Chief Robert Bradshaw acknowledges as a rash of sexual assaults in the UNR area.

Bradshaw said a probe into the matter was "botched" and the public was misinformed.

Bizzari said he hasn't changed either his feelings about the matter or about the RPD since Bradshaw's disclosure.

"People don't always do their job right," he said. "I respect Bradshaw for coming out and saying, 'We goofed.'"

Still, Bizzari said he doesn't want students to feel misled.

"I agree that there is a problem," he said. "But for all we know, it could be another female going around taking money."

According to Rose Drenburg, who handles sexual assault cases for UNRPD, four students have viewed a photo lineup. She would not say whether any have identified Skinner as the assailant, since the matter is still under investigation.

Nervousness in the campus area continues, a spokesman for the Reno Rape Crisis Center said.

Outreach and Resource Coordinator Loren Cowen said that calls from the campus area to the center have increased, although callers have seldom called police.

needs other qualifications besides that of good grades.

"We work with children who come from families that are economically diverse and multi-ethnic," she said. "In hiring tutors, I look for someone who can be sensitive to the needs and aspirations of kids with different backgrounds."

Learn what Coffin and Keys has not.

For those of you who do not know, Coffin and Keys is an underground organization here at UNR. They work for the "betterment of UNR," or so say their fliers.

But some of you probably have never read the words of this underground band.

There's a reason for that. You never see the fliers.

We at Sagebrush have discovered the best way to have people read what you have to say is to have it available to them. That's why 7,000 copies of Sagebrush are printed twice a week.

If you want to get your message out to 7,000 (or more) people, we suggest our Classifieds.

You can print up fliers.

Bizzari's attitude no good at UNR

UNR police chief Larry Bizzari needs a course in how to win friends and influence people — but not on university time.

Rumors and reports about his apparent intradepartmental misconduct have been flooding the Sagebrush office since the semester began. The people under him are not happy, and from what they've had to say, they have good reason to be angry.

The problems stem from the chief's unwillingness to trust the people under his command. He knew what kind of department he was taking over when he took the job, and he should have figured out how to best use the people in it, instead of trying to get rid of them.

All they want to do is enforce Nevada law. They don't want to enforce Bizzari's lenient drug policies that do not coincide with Nevada law. They do not want to remove shotguns from the police cars (it's practically standard procedure on every police force to have the guns in the car).

If they couldn't handle those kinds of firearms, then they couldn't be law officers in this state anyway.

His policies are jeopardizing the safety of every police officer in the department, which is one of the main reasons former Lieutenant Richard Kishpaugh resigned. He was a good police officer and he had been with UNRPD for a number of years.

These people are not troublemakers. They are willing to admit that the police department has some problems and has developed a bad reputation over the years, but mostly due to the practices of a small few.

They want to see the department prosper, and they are professionals who want to do their job.

But they are unable to do so with Bizzari as the chief.

If he'd trusted these people when he first took office, such as conferring with them as to Nevada law before issuing a no-arrest-for-drug-users policy, then things would be a lot smoother for everyone.

Time to end UNR-UNLV civil war

UNR and UNLV really ought to get together on a few things to make a Nevada college education a better experience.

The two schools, although they are the only large universities in the state, lack communication and cooperation. And it's the students who suffer from this dilemma.

For example, I am from southern Nevada and I attended UNLV my freshman year. That year I received a student loan from the university to pay for my classes to be paid back when I finish school.

The next year I transferred to UNR. The complication came when I discovered I was required to inform UNLV every semester concerning my enrollment status at UNR.

And if UNLV doesn't get enrollment verification quickly and efficiently by a certain date, I start paying off my loan. I paid $60 recently.

To remedy this, it would be easy for the schools to work together, as a "university system" to simplify communication channels. UNLV should automatically know when I am in school and when I'm not.

I'm sure I'm not the only University of Nevada System student who has had this problem.

Many southern Nevadans attend UNR each year just as many northern Nevadans head south.

They leave home for two reasons: 1. to get away from parents, brothers, sisters and friends, and 2. because they have heard such terrible things about their respective local universities.

Another problem is the transfer of credits from one Nevada university to the other. It is slow and tedious.

This process, possibly done with computers, could be quick and painless. But the two schools act as though one is located on the Pacific coast and the other in the backwoods of Vermont.

The fact is that there are many students who have attended both schools at one time or another. And these students need easy access to both.

After all, UNLV and UNR have much in common. Both have good business colleges.

Both have the ability to produce doctors and scientists.

Both teach English, history, art, math and foreign languages.

Geoff Schumacher

I had stimulating classes and thought-provoking professors at UNLV just as I've had at UNR.

By bringing the two schools together, they each would vastly improve. Both have unique things to offer and a student would be all the better educated if he had the opportunity to experience both Las Vegas- and Reno-style university education.

Maybe professors regularly could be guest lecturers at the other school. Maybe a student-transfer system could be set up. Maybe the two student governments could share ideas and activities.

The possibilities are endless.

The two schools also should compete more often in athletics, creating a friendly but fierce rivalry.

As it is, UNLV will only play UNR in football every other season. Granted, the men's basketball and baseball teams play each other frequently.

But what about volleyball, softball, track, cross country, golf, tennis and swimming?

UNLV and UNR are strangers. They need to develop a respect for each other and start bringing together the qualities of each into a unity of learning.

Solso dicusses Daniloff, trends in Russian psychology doctrine

By Rick Hoover

"It is a violation. He had on his person documents that were considered secret. This is in violation of Soviet law. They (the Soviets) could have nailed him."

This is how Dr. Robert Solso, UNR Psychology Department Chairman, views the Nicholas Daniloff affair.

Solso, who has been to the Soviet Union six times, most recently in January 1985, had met Daniloff on his trips to the Soviet Union through the U.S. Embassy.

But Solso does not believe that Daniloff is a spy.

"I think he was set up," Solso said. "I do not have any absolute proof, but my impression is that he certainly was set up."

Solso also believes that Daniloff broke an unwritten rule that could have resulted in a jail term.

"We (Americans) were admonished while in the Soviet Union to never accept a sealed package," Solso said. "Every week, someone would come up to me with an envelope and say, 'Just slip this in your pocket and send it to Israel,' because they couldn't get it out. I never did it because I could have been arrested."

Solso had appointments at both Moscow and Leningrad State Universities, where he taught psychology under the auspices of a Fulbright Fellowship, and also did research in Moscow as a member of the National Academy of Sciences.

"They (the Soviets) tend to be more philosophically oriented," Solso said. "They deal with a concept that is called 'activity,' which is roughly correspondent to motivation. It's basically looking at the way that people direct their behavior, the underlying causes."

Solso said the Soviets do laboratory research on animals such as rats and rabbits to accomplish this end.

"If you put a probe in part of the cortex, you notice the brain activity that many times occurs before the action," Solso said.

Solso said Soviet psychologists are also investigating the human optical process.

"A second area of research is in eye movement," Solso said. "Looking at the way people look at pictures. They (the Soviets) spearheaded this research."

Solso said that the Soviets have been working in this field going back 50 years, but the Western world has only been doing research for 20 to 30 years.

But he does not believe this is a major disadvantage.

"Our technology is far advanced of anything they have," Solso said. "We use computers, they're not (using computers). (The Soviets use) very poor, arcane equipment."

Solso said the Soviets are also doing research in the fields of developmental psychology and child psychology.

"They call it 'Bringing Up Children,'" Solso said. "This line of work is very typical of Marxist-Leninist tradition. The child is seen as a product of the environment. Society is conceptualized as being perfect society, so the child is perfect."

A fourth area of research is social psychology, Solso said.

"That area, especially since Andropoc, has become interesting to the state because of its desire to increase the productivity of the workers," Solso said. "It's a reflection of the difficulties of the present economy."

Some of the problems that Solso mentioned were alcoholism, absenteeism, and a lack of morale.

"Problems that would not increase

'The Trial' plays this weekend

The Nevada Repertory Company continues its season opening with The Trial adapted from Franz Kafka by Steven Berkoff.

It will be presented Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sunday at 2 p.m., in the Church Fine Arts Theater on the UNR campus.

The Trial chronicles the experiences of Josef K., who is accused and arrested for unknown crimes by a mysterious court and who attempts to plot his acquittal through the complex maze of an illogical legal system that presumes guilt and allows no defense.

Images, symbols and ideas intertwine in a production concept in which actions transform from character to character and take on the personality of inanimate objects in order to express the intensity of Josef K.'s hellish nightmare.

the productivity of the state," Solso said.

A fifth area of Soviet research is in the field of clinical psychology-psychiatry, or the treatment of mentally ill patients.

"I think they are very far behind the Western countries," Solso said. "They are still using a basis of drugs and a little psychological intervention."

The problem is not just technological, Solso said.

"It is an ideological struggle," Solso said. "Freudianism has not been embraced or accepted by the Soviets. The writings of Freud are prohibited."

Solso believes this is due to three reasons.

"The ideology of Freud is inconsistent with the dialectical materialism of Marx," Solso said.

The second reason is also ideological.

"Freud talked about unconscious motivation, such as sexual desires," Solso said. "In Marxism, one of the basic beliefs is that the social animal wants to cooperate with society instead of pulling apart society."

"The third reason is because Freud was a Jew," Solso said. "There is still a relative amount of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union."

While in the Soviet Union, Solso saw changes in the culture along with the changes he saw in his research.

"The cultures are so varied," Solso said. "They go from Europeans in the West to Oriental in the East, from Turkish in the South to Eskimos in the North.

"There are 138 different language groups. Each of the 15 republics has its own official language in addition to Russian.

"For the last 20 to 30 years, the government has had a program referred to as the Russification of the Soviet Union, to make it more like Russia."

The program has not gone as smoothly as the government would have liked it.

"In the Baltic area, there is great resistance," Solso said. "They don't like the language change. In the southern republics, the people are fiercely independent. They laugh at the Russians down there."

But Solso said it is very difficult to organize resistance.

"If you have a party, with just 14 or 15 people, you have to inform the police," Solso said. "Otherwise, you can get arrested."

Solso left the Soviet Union with a dislike for the government. He also left with a belief that he is not alone in this dislike.

"The Soviet people are wonderfully generous," Solso said. "I enjoyed the people, but not the government. Judging from my experiences there, I don't think that the Soviet people like the government much, either."

"Freudianism hasn't been accepted by the Soviets"

"I think (Daniloff) was set up"

"The Soviet people are wonderfully generous"

Smiths are very critical of world

By Michael Bacon

Once an obscure English band, The Smiths are now enjoying worldwide acclaim as a top band of the '80s.

Their success in the U.K. began with the release of their first hit, "Hand on Glove" and reached America when the album Meat is Murder was released 1984.

What makes the Smiths different from the other "gloom rockers" of their era is found within the band's lead vocalist, Morrissey.

Morrissey, as he has named himself, is a celibate vegetarian who hates his Queen and wails in agony over the inhumane treatment of livestock, among other things.

His unique, boyish voice stands out of the music as would an instrument playing a bit off key. While most of their songs are upbeat and danceable, the lyrics are intensely critical of life and may seem negative.

In fact, Morrissey's songs all share a bittersweet tone. The lyrics of most Smith's songs can be read as tragic, but realistic poetry.

"Pretty Girls Make Graves" is one song that illustrates Morrissey's apparent lack of trust for the female gender. The current single, "The Queen is Dead" shows obvious protest for the British monarchy.

With a few extra touches, like yodeling and cynical lyrics, The Smiths stand alone from the likes of Echo and the Bunnymen and other British wailers.

The so-called cow-punk style is apparent in the song "Vicar in a Tutu," which is on their newest LP, The Queen is Dead.

The Queen is Dead is an LP in which the listener can hear musical styles representing most of the band's past works. Still, this album lacks the harsh-sounding recordings heard on albums like Hatful of Hollow and The Smiths.

Especially in Hatful the sound was almost amateur, and a true Smiths fan would most likely agree that the untamed sound was more appealing.

The commercialization of the band is apparent in the latter recordings, but it is doubtful the band will ever become as commercialized as Hall and Oates or Huey Lewis due to Morrissey's commitment to social statement through music.

All the albums by the Smiths are worth buying, but one cannot expect to hear anything on them that would get played on Reno radio stations.

The one exception is an occasional spot by KUNR's Bottom Forty program and a once-heard spot on KOZZ's Sunday evening program.

Imports of the Smiths are available occasionally in Reno, but a short trip (2½ hours) to Tower Records on Watt Avenue in Sacramento could prove worthwhile for such un-Reno bands as the Smiths.

Imago comes to Lawlor Sunday

By Susie Titus

UNR's Performing Artists Series will present Imago, the nationally acclaimed masters of stage illusion, at 8 p.m. Sunday at the Pioneer Theater.

Imago, formerly the Theatre Mask Ensemble, leads the audience to a dreamworld of fanciful characters and odd creatures with their original use of masks.

This talented company creates their own masks and costumes with papier-mache, wood, plaster, paints and various "knickknacks."

But face-coverings are just the beginning.

Imago captivates children and adults alike with their magical stagings that defy categorization.

Mime, dance, drama, acrobatics, costuming and stunning visuals combine to produce a fantasy world where nothing is what it seems — where tops are bottoms, backs are fronts and arms are legs.

Imago is the second feature in the Performing Artist Series which continues through April.

The series also features the Gary Burton Group, featuring jazz vibratones on Nov. 12, The Muir String Quartet, on Mar. 7 and the performance of George Bernard Shaw's "Candida," performed by the acclaimed Guthrie Theater on April 30.

All shows begin at 8 p.m. at the Pioneer Theater Auditorium.

Tickets to Imago are $10 reserved and may be purchased at the Lawlor Events Center ticket office and all the usual outlets or charged by calling 784-4444.

Lombardi Rec a fun place to hang around

Brett Pauly Sagebrush

King Pong — Ryan Tors plays ping pong in Lombardi Tuesday.

By Susie Cerio

It's amazing what can be discovered when you open your eyes and take a look around.

For example you'll be surprised with the Lombardi Recreation Building which offers many activities you may not be aware of.

For starters, there's a long list of intramural sports which Lombardi will be sponsoring this fall. To participate, you must check the dates for sign-ups, check the regulations and gather a team.

Flag football, volleyball, and tube water polo have already begun. Some of the upcoming sports include racquetball, tennis, basketball and table tennis.

For those who enjoy the outdoors, there is golf and cross country. On the damper side, there is swimming and diving.

If intramurals are not your style, there is plenty more to do. Lombardi has a well-equipped weight room for use. For exercise on the lighter side, there are four ping-pong tables.

Lombardi has a beautiful, well-kept, Olympic-sized pool. There is also a separate diving pool with three diving boards.

The pool is open Monday through Friday between noon and 1 p.m. and from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturdays, the hours are 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and on Sunday the pool is open from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

There are seven racquetball courts and two squash/handball courts. Reservations for a court can be made for the following day in person at the equipment desk after 4:30 p.m. Reservations by telephone can be made between 4:45 and 5 p.m.

Six outdoor tennis courts and two indoor tennis courts are available. There are also four basketball courts.

For convenience, there are locker rooms complete with lockers and showers available. There is also a dry sauna in each locker room. You may obtain a towel for use from the equipment desk.

The building is open to all of the university faculty, staff and students.

The faculty and staff of Truckee Meadows Community College, the Desert Research Institute, and the University of Nevada — Las Vegas students and staff may use the facilities for a fee of $10 per semester or $20 per year.

Members of the immediate family of the faculty, staff, and students may use

Gayle appears at Harrah's thru Thursday

Crystal Gayle will be appearing at Harrah's Lake Tahoe Hotel & Casino today through Thursday.

Combining pop, country and blues, Gayle is an artist whose style is hard to categorize and whose appeal is as diverse as the voice itself.

When asked about her style of music, she replies, "I never label my music. I just try to sing good songs and hope that as many people as possible like what they're hearing."

Obviously, they must. Gayle already has two platinum as well as four gold albums to her credit. She has twice been named "Outstanding Female Vocalist" by the Country Music Association and has received the same accolade from the Academy of Country Music three times.

She received a Grammy for her performance on her multi-million seller, "Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue." And she has been named "Favorite Female Country Vocalist" at the American Music Awards three times as well as being named "Favorite Country Female Video Artist" this year.

At Harrah's, Gayle will be performing songs from her newly-released album, Straight To The Heart, including her current hit single, "Cry," as well as many of her past hits.

'Crocodile' is money well spent

By Rob Stillwell

After waiting in line a half an hour for tickets to Crocodile Dundee, I didn't know what to expect.

I thought it was going to be another Raiders of the Lost Ark. Well, it was, in part.

This movie has all the adventure that Raiders did and much more.

The story is about an Australian,

Crocodile Dundee (Paul Hogan), who has survived the most hostile and primitive environment known to man. This is the only way of life he knows.

His legend attracts the attention of a New York reporter, who wants to know more about this present-day Tarzan.

The lady reporter (Linda Koslowski) stays with Dundee for a few days, and is forced to live off the land. Soon enough she turns things around and brings Dundee with her to New York City.

Now all Dundee has to do is make it through a week in New York.

This Paramount Pictures film, directed by Peter Faiman, has a strange kind of romance, offering spectacular suspense and great adventure. This is a must see, definitely worth the $5 charge. In fact, I have already made plans to see it again. It was that good.

Wolf Pack defends top ranking

By Geoff Schumacher

UNR may be in for its toughest game so far this season when it battles Stephen F. Austin Saturday in the first game of a three-game homestand at Mackay Stadium.

The Lumberjacks are 4-0 this season and are ranked No. 16 in Division I-AA. They defeated Alcorn State 28-14, Prairie View A&M 46-14, Lamar 38-25 and West Texas State 36-31.

"They are an excellent ball team," Wolf Pack coach Chris Ault said. "I think they should be ranked higher than they are. They will be the toughest team by far that we've played this season."

UNR has a 5-0 record, 3-0 in Big Sky play. The Pack is No. 1 in Division I-AA and 27th overall in USA Today's computerized poll.

The Pack's victims have been Cal State-Fullerton 49-3, Sam Houston State 35-7, Montana 51-17, Montana State 61-10 and Weber State 38-24.

Saturday's 1 p.m. game will be UNR's first at home since Sept. 20 against Montana. A near-capacity crowd is expected for the 21st birthday party of Mackay Stadium.

UNR has won 13 games in a row at Mackay and is 23-2 in the past three-and-a-half seasons. The Pack's record overall at Mackay is 91-32-2.

Stephen F. Austin was co-Gulf Star Conference champion last year with Sam Houston State. Its overall record was 9-2.

The Lumberjacks did not participate in post-season play, however, because it was their first season in Division I-AA and they were ineligible.

That league champion returns several top offensive threats.

Senior quarterback Todd Whitten is a pre-season All-American, according to Football News, and was second-team All-Gulf Star last season.

In four games this season, Whitten has completed 62-of-104 passes for 714 yards and nine touchdowns. He is the school's career record holder in completions, attempts, yards and touchdowns. He led the Gulf Star last season in passing efficiency and total offense.

Whitten's favorite receivers are senior Drake Williams, who has caught seven passes for 143 yards and four touchdowns, and junior Melvin Patterson, who has caught seven passes for 127 yards and one touchdown.

Tight end John Evans is a pre-season All-American, according to Sporting News and Football News. In two games this season, Evans has caught nine passes for 104 yards and one touchdown. He missed the first two games of the season with an injured ankle.

In the backfield, Andrew Ray is the fullback. He has rushed 57 times for 354 yards and three touchdowns this season as a senior. He also has caught 11 passes for 98 yards. At 5 foot 10, 181 pounds, Ray is a small fullback.

Senior Henry Canady has rushed for 242 yards on 30 carries for an 8.1 average per run. He has run for three touchdowns and also caught five passes for 24 yards.

Defensively, the Lumberjacks are inexperienced. But several players make up for the overall youthfulness of the squad.

Senior weak safety Darrell Harkless was first-team All-Gulf Star the last season and is a pre-season All-American, according to Football News.

Harkless had 91 total tackles, broke up 15 passes and intercepted six passes last season. This season, he already has 18 total tackles, seven pass breakups and five interceptions.

Stephen F. Austin's top tackler this season is linebacker Jim Carlton. The sophomore has 36 total tackles, 22 unassisted, in four games.

Second to Carlton is linebacker David Whitmore who has 21 total tackles so far as a freshman.

The Lumberjacks' top pass rusher is Vince Adams, a defensive end with three sacks this season.

Cornerback Anthony Newsom is the fastest player on the team and has intercepted three passes already.

More than 120 Lumberjack fans are expected to travel to Reno with the team today.

For the Pack, sophomore fullback

Charvez Foger is expected to return from an ankle injury after missing the Weber State game. Reserve Lucky Witherspoon should start the game at fullback, however.

UNR leads the Big Sky so far in total offense (570.8 yards per game), rushing offense (228.0), passing offense (342.8), and scoring offense (46.8 points per game).

The Pack is second behind Boise State in total defense (205.8 allowed per game), first in rushing defense (64.6), fifth in pass defense (249.4) and first in scoring defense (12.2 points per game).

Halfback Lucius Floyd leads the conference in rushing with 513 yards on 88 carries and a per-game average of 102.6 yards. Foger is third with 294 yards on 55 carries for a 73.5 per-game average.

Senior split end Bryan Calder leads the Big Sky in receiving with 38 catches for 610 yards and six touchdowns.

Pack quarterback Eric Beavers has a 173.3 passing-efficiency rating to lead the conference. He has completed 94-of-152 passes for 1,539 yards and 14 touchdowns. His efficiency is good enough for second in the nation.

UNR cornerback Joe Peterson leads the Big Sky in interceptions with five for 62 yards.

The Pack is coming off a sluggish victory over Weber State in Ogden, Utah. But playing at home, playing healthy and defending a No. 1 ranking should kindle a new spirit in UNR.

Baseball team improves by battling JCs

By Rob Willis

For the UNR baseball team the fall season continues and the Pack still rolls.

During the last week and a half, UNR has managed to beat up on Lassen College 16-2 and sweep a three-game set from Laney College, 15-11, 16-2 and 15-3.

The scores may sound impressive and the victories decisive but there is more to fall baseball than overpowering junior college teams.

UNR head coach Gary Powers and his staff use these games in an attempt to build a team from the returners, JC transfers and freshmen who arrived on the campus in September.

"We definitely have the potential," Powers said. "But potential only goes so far."

That potential which Powers talks of needs to be worked and molded. The series of fall games is giving the Wolf Pack coach a chance to gauge just what he will have come Jan. 30, when the spring season begins.

Starting to emerge are players who may have the skills to make the Pack a team to be reckoned with in 1987.

At first base, John DeRicco, a freshman from Manogue High School has caught Power's interest.

"His hitting has been impressive," he said.

"Second base is a battle between four guys. No one person has emerged."

Mike Bosco, a transfer from De Anza College, may have some inside running to an infield position.

"He has played well defensively. His exceptional speed allows us to do some things on offense," Powers said.

An aspect of last season's play which failed to either impress or please Powers was the infield defense, particularly on the left side.

Dale Hensen, a freshman from San Diego, may ease some of his worries.

"Dale has played well. He is a solid defensive third baseman and has been getting better and better with his hitting," Powers said.

"Last year the left part of the infield was the weakest part of our game. It has been improved dramatically."

The pitching staff, which will be hoping that its head coach's prediction of a better defense is a correct one, returns starters Jeff Barry and Mark Titchener along with reliever Jim Fitzpatrick.

To help that nucleus will be a crop of newcomers and two returning outfielders who will attempt to gun down opposing batters.

Standouts, according to Powers, in early season action have been, John Barton, a JC transfer from Laney College and freshmen Doug Van Trees of Wooster High School, Charles Oppio of Manogue and Rob Sharp of San Diego.

This coming season may see Powers calling for pitching help from the outfield rather than the bullpen. He looks to returning outfielders Rob Richie and Scott Anderson as being of assistance to his team on the mound.

"Scott Anderson and Rob Richie quite possibly could be our number one and number two pitchers," Powers said. "They are going to see a lot of action on the mound."

"Anderson throws in the high 80s (mph) and Richie in the high 80s and low 90s. If we didn't use them we would be nuts."

When they are not striking out opposing batters, Anderson and Richie, along with junior Lance Bradford will take up positions in the outfield. Richie, who was voted a 1986 Collegiate All-American and Bradford, who with his outfield partner was a leader in conference averages last season, should make the Wolf Pack coach pleased with the shape of his outfield.

Pushing the tried and tested players is a freshman from San Diego, Don Angotti.

"He has a good chance of starting," Powers said. "He has sound defense and is hitting as well as anybody."

"We have six outfielders. Any could play and we could be effective. Infield — we have two guys for each position and our pitching is more than capable."

Directing operations from catcher will be returning senior Jose Serrato, who last season broke the UNR single-season home run record.

Serrato has enjoyed a successful summer, culminated by his receiving the award for most valuable player in a Midwestern summer league which Powers referred to as the "best summer league in the nation."

Although Powers was reluctant to divulge fall averages he hinted at just a few.

"Angotti and Jose (Serrato) are hitting over .500 and Lance Bradford, Anderson and DeRicco over .400," he said.

The UNR baseball team will play Sacramento State today at 2:30 p.m. at Moana Municipal Stadium.

The Pack is scheduled to play Diablo Valley JC Saturday at 9 a.m. and Sunday at 10 p.m.

Admission is free to all fall UNR baseball games.

Zimmerman honored in WCAC

By Ward Farrell

Junior Kari Zimmerman was named this week's West Coast Athletic Conference player of the week.

Zimmerman had 36 kills, four aces, 27 digs and 15 blocks in the Wolf Pack's victories over USF and Santa Clara.

UNR travels to the University of San Diego today and United States International Saturday.

According to coach Lane Murray, the Pack will not be able to rely on the court as they did last weekend.

"We're playing some good ball squads," Murray said. "We're playing in their gym and we have to travel. We have to try to keep intensity up. We can't afford to relax."

In last Saturday night's games against Santa Clara, the Pack dropped the first two games before coming back to win the last three.

Next weekend UNR will play at Loyola Marymount and 20th-ranked Pepperdine.

"Any team is capable of an upset," Murray said. "If we play the kind of ball that we are capable of, we will do very well."

The Pack has been practicing what Lane Murray calls a quick-pace defense, but the offense has not taken effect yet.

"We have been running the offense, but we have not won points with it," Murray said. "We're looking to beat them with the offense."

UNR returns home Oct. 31 against USIU at 7:30 p.m. in the Old Gym.

their lowest-selling show so far on this tour sold 6,007 seats.

Student tickets for the concert will be $11.50, and general tickets will sell for $15.50.

In other senate action, the senate held a "team-building exercise" after their meeting on Wednesday.

The event was to include a scavenger hunt and dinner with a guest speaker at Louis' Basque Corner afterward. The senate approved $400 for the dinner to be funded from the senate host fund.

"A normal retreat would be costly (at least $3,000), so this would save some money," Larry Rosborough, vice president of activities, said. "We felt like we needed to stress the fact that we are a team, and we needed to do it as soon as possible."

Bill Johnson reported that Oingo Boingo sales are up to 1,642 seats, and less than 1,000 more must be sold to reach the break-even point.

Johnson said, "Things are moving; people are talking."

ASUN President Todd Plimpton reported that President Reagan will be coming to Lawlor Events Center when he returns from Iceland. The exact date of the President's visit is not yet known.

Men runners stress quickness

By Rob Stillwell

The largest of all cross country meets on the West Coast took place Saturday on the Stanford University Golf Course.

The UNR men's cross country team finished 17th out of 37 teams in the Stanford Invitational.

"We were a little disappointed with the outcome," UNR coach Jack Cook said.

The University of North Carolina won the meet and Stanford finished second. U.C. Irvine placed third, UCLA came in fourth and Brigham Young University took fifth place.

The winning time was 31 minutes, 38 seconds by a North Carolina runner. The first one across the finish line for the Pack was Robert Tawala finishing in 31:42 to place 17th.

The next closest UNR runners were sophomore Steve Lewis in 104th, Dan McGreal in 134th and Robert Chalmers and Dan Murphy in 162nd and 163rd respectively.

More than 265 competitors finished.

The 10,000-meter course was a very demanding one, according to Cook. The first mile was flat. Some of the runners jumped the gun and paced themselves a little fast for the hills in the second half of the course.

Both Chalmers and Scott Peterson complained of breathing problems and freezing up of the legs. In fact, Peterson was forced to drop out.

"I think that some of our runners got caught up in the emotion in the first mile and it wasn't until the last half when reality set in," Cook said.

Cook's team plans on changing a few things in its practice schedule, concentrating more on speed, especially necessary for this week's meet, which is on an all flat course.

Saturday, the Pack will run in the University of California Invitational at Golden Gate Fields horse track. Entering the second half of its season, UNR will compete against No. 1 seed Stanford, U.C. Berkeley, San Jose State, U.S. Davis, Big Sky's Weber State and the University of San Francisco.

"We hope to do better or we are in deep trouble," Cook said.

Reader's Digest recommends stricter athletic rules

Big-time college athletics is mired in scandal. Top high-school athletes are lured by recruiters with under-the-table payments. Players who can barely read or write are admitted to well-known colleges, then kept academically eligible just so they can compete in sports. Coaches, alumni and school boosters regularly bend and break rules, all in the name of victory.

The bottom line is cold, hard cash, reports the October Reader's Digest. Winning guarantees income. Football alone can generate up to $10 million a year in some schools. Last season 18 bowl games disbursed more than $40 million.

Schools will often do almost anything to ensure success. The NCAA revealed this year that Texas Christian University boosters handed over cash payments of $49,025 to one student and $37,500 to another. In New Orleans, Tulane University abolished its varsity basketball team following disclosure that players were paid to take part in a point-shaving scheme.

As if all this were not enough, the specter of drugs hangs over American athletic programs. At Clemson University in South Carolina, three former coaches pleaded guilty to illegally dispensing steroids and phenylbutazone, an anti-inflammatory agent. At the University of Maryland, Len Bias, No. 1 draft choice of the Boston Celtics, died in June of cocaine intoxication.

Hurt most by schools looking the other way are the student athletes themselves. Bias' death was followed by the revelation that he had not passed a single academic course last spring. In 1982, basketball player Kevin Ross confirmed the shocking story that he had played four seasons for Creighton University even though his reading and writing ability was no better than grade-school level.

Only a minute fraction of these student athletes ever become professional athletes. Once their college eligibility is used up, most are left to fend for themselves as best they can.

Without a doubt, reform in college sports is sorely needed, and the NCAA is making a start. This year the NCAA began phasing in a significant rule change affecting academic eligibility for athletes. Known as Proposition 48, the measure is scheduled to be fully implemented by 1988.

At that time, for athletes to be eligible, they must have achieved a 2.0 high-school grade-point average in a core curriculum of 11 academic subjects, as well as a minimum combined score of 700 out of 1600 in the SAT, or a composite score of 15 out of 35 in the ACT Assessment Program.

The NCAA has also approved drug testing at football bowl games and at selected NCAA championship events.

Reader's Digest suggests the following additional steps.

1. Declare freshman ineligible for varsity sports. Freshmen need time to adjust to college life.

2. Require satisfactory progress toward a degree. Student athletes must be required to fulfill the same core-curriculum requirements as non-athletes. No student should be allowed to play varsity sports unless he or she is on schedule to graduate within five years.

3. Integrate athletes into campus life. Athletic dorms should be abolished, seasons shortened and practice requirements reduced.

4. Make drug testing mandatory. For those who test positive, one violation should result in suspension from varsity sports, and drug counseling. Two more violations should bar the individual from inter-collegiate athletics.

5. Share television revenues equally. TV income should be shared among all schools playing big-time sports — not just the ones that appear on TV.

6. Ban boosters. They should have no place in the recruiting of athletes. Fund-raising should be controlled by the college president and not by partnerships of semi-autonomous athletic departments and booster clubs.

7. Increase financial aid. Since the NCAA prohibits student athletes from holding jobs during the academic year, they should be given a stipend to cover basic necessities.
