Financial aid cuts may hurt enrollment

By Adrian Fox

A threat of lower enrollment is looming over UNR as the Reagan administration prepares to tighten the reins on student financial aid.

The Reagan administration plans a reduction of student financial assistance by $2.1 billion and a reduction of $1.1 billion or 47 percent in the Guaranteed Student Loan program. Pell grants would also suffer a cut of $1.1 billion.

"The proposed cuts are going to affect around 500 students, which is a pretty significant amount," Alison Benson, director of student financial services at UNR, said.

"We have close to 3,000 students depending on the Guaranteed Student Loan program and if all of a sudden they can't borrow any money, we might see some attending part-time instead of full-time."

UNR President Joe Crowley said Benson's figures are accurate.

"If these proposals are accepted by Congress, there will be a reduction in enrollment," he said. "This would mean higher education would not be available to the people who need it most."

At UNR, the top four federal financial assistance programs are the Guaranteed Student Loan program, the Pell Grant program, the College Work Study program and the National Direct Student Loan program.

The history of large-scale federal aid programs for higher education began in 1965 when the Eighty-Ninth Congress enacted the Higher Education Act. This aid to college students came in the form of grants and loans. Included in the act was the formation of the GSL program as an aid to middle-income families who could not obtain grants.

In 1972, the Nixon administration greatly expanded programs for student assistance by amending the act. These actions included the development of the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants — now referred to as Pell Grants — and increased aid to the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) program.

Beginning in the 1980s, the Reagan administration brought a reverse trend to federal student assistance. Between 1980 and 1986, student aid from the federal government has decreased by 10 percent, largely as a result of inflation and the national deficit.

The administration is seeking more cuts in the financial assistance programs.

According to Benson, the Reagan administration will focus the blades of its budget-cutting scissors on UNR's largest program — the Guaranteed Student Loan program.

In the last 15 years, this program has mushroomed nationally from $1 billion to $8.2 billion. The GSL has taken the place of the Pell Grant as the most common form of financial assistance — accounting for more than 50 percent of all student aid in 1985-86, compared with 17 percent in 1975-76.

The Reagan administration has already taken its first steps toward decreasing the amount of money the GSL program takes out of the fiscal year budget. Since Oct. 17, 1986, students must qualify for the GSL in the same way they qualify for a Pell Grant.

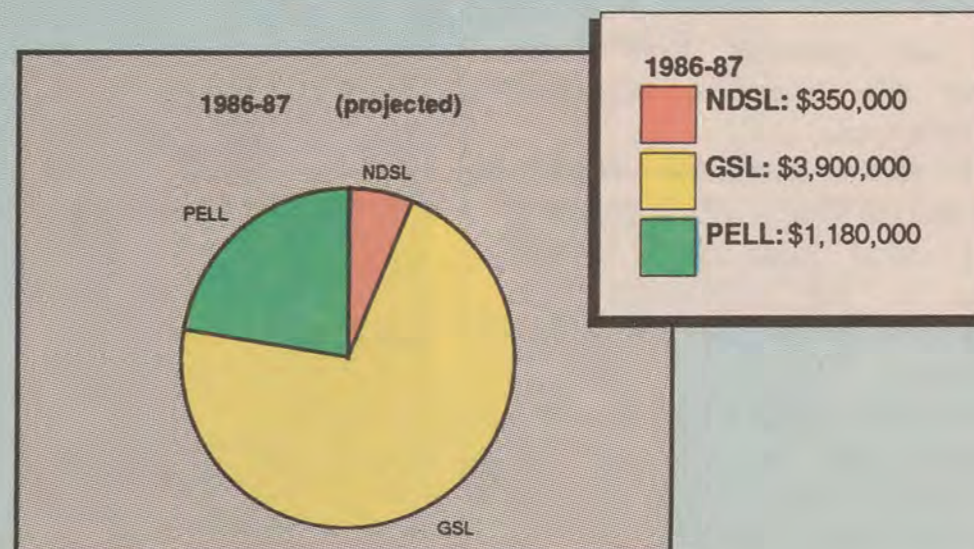

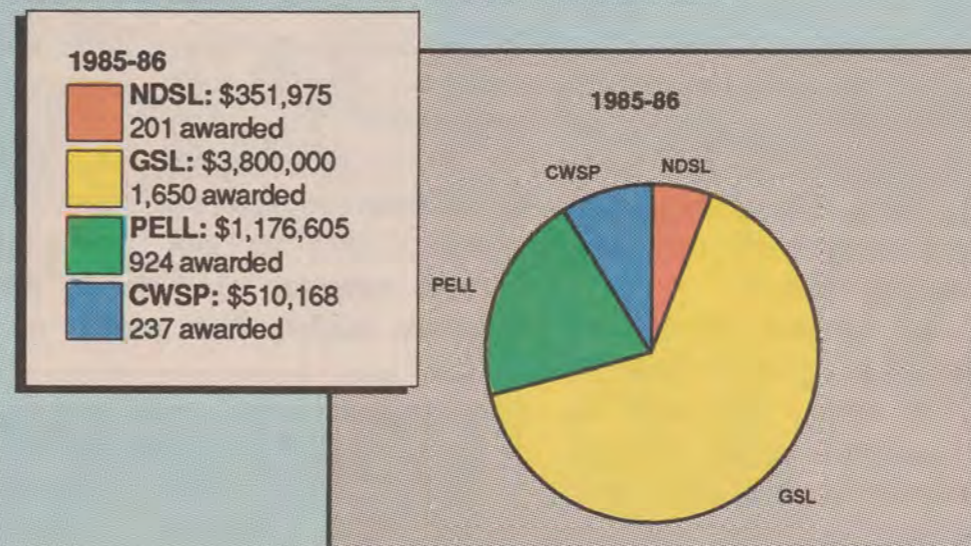

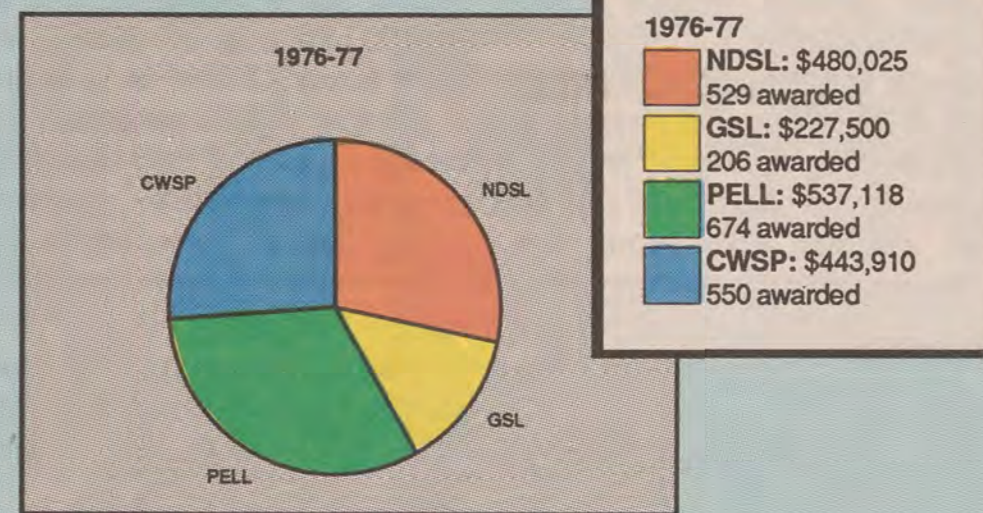

According to Benson, 30 percent of the students who qualified previously will not be able to qualify now.

"Previously, students had to fill out a 'needs test,'" Benson said. "Now they have to fill out a complete financial statement."

"Families with incomes under $30,000 used to qualify automatically. Now we have to take a lot more things into consideration like assets, real estate and

Crowley focuses in on AVP candidate Brown

By T. Alan Moore

President Crowley said Friday that Montana State's Dennis Brown is the "primary candidate under consideration" to become UNR's new academic vice-president.

Crowley called Brown, the dean of letters and science at Montana State, a well-balanced candidate and said he made a very good impression on everyone he met during this year's AVP search.

Brown, whose experience includes three years as an assistant academic vice-president at the University of Idaho, will return to Reno this week with his wife Linda for further meetings with campus decision-makers.

During their stay, the couple will be making their own decisions about the Reno area and exploring real estate opportunities and the employment climate for Mrs. Brown, Crowley added.

But until everyone's decisions are in, Crowley said that all six finalists are still in the running for the school's primary academic position.

The other five candidates are UNR Arts and Science Dean Paul Page; J. Richard Williams, dean of engineering at Cal State-Long Beach; E. Joe Middlebrooks, vice-president for academic affairs at Tennessee Tech; Robert Carrubba, graduate dean at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte; and Portland State's William Paudler, dean of liberal arts and sciences.

Brown, who holds a doctorate in biochemistry, has combined nearly two decades of teaching and research with six years of administrative experience to meet Crowley's requirement of balance.

"All areas are important to me," Crowley said of the multiple skills of administration, research and teaching needed for the job. "It's rare that you find a person who fits them all to a tee."

If hired, Brown would oversee all academic programs at UNR. Campus observers say the AVP selection will affect UNR academic policy for years to come.

AVP Search Committee Chairman Thomas Nickles declined to comment on whether Brown was the committee's sole recommendation to Crowley, saying such disclosure would not be fair to any of the six candidates he said were still involved.

Crowley said he expects to make a final decision by the end of the week.

The AVP office was vacated last fall with the resignation of Richard Davies. Since then, Page has served as acting vice-president.

Speaker denounces Reagan's Star Wars proposal

By Gilbert Ellason

President Reagan's proposed Strategic Defense Initiative, better known as "Star Wars," will never work, according to Dr. Len Zane, a professor of physics at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

Zane disagreed with Reagan's philosophy that SDI's technical difficulties will be overcome because the United States is a nation that put man on the moon.

"Putting a man on the moon is a one-player game," he said. "SDI is a two-player game."

Zane spoke in a Wednesday afternoon lecture, "Star Wars: Fact and Fiction," in the Lecture Building to about 20 people.

Zane described proposed SDI systems which he said will never work. One system, involving earth-based laser beams reflected from geosynchronous mirrors (fixed in orbit over a Soviet target), would require some 420 "fighting mirrors."

To deploy these mirrors using shuttle crews would take fifty years even if more than eight missions were launched yearly, according to Zane. He added that tremendous energy would be required for lasers.

"It would consume 60 percent of current U.S. energy production at a cost of $100 billion for 100 seconds to destroy 1,400 Soviet ICBMs," he said.

Another system proposes to cut the energy expense of earth-based lasers by powering lasers from space-detonated nuclear devices. According to Zane, this is inadvisable because he said if the United States puts nuclear weapons in orbit, the Soviets will also.

Zane denounced a 1983 Reagan speech which claimed that SDI would "render nuclear weapons impotent and obsolete."

"The speech is hyperbole," Zane said. "It won't work."

According to Zane, such systems would only target against silos. He said they would be useless against other forms of nuclear warfare such as the deployment of bombers, submarines, cruise missiles, or battlefield weapons.

"Reagan says yes and 57 U.S. Nobel Prize winners in the National Academy of Science say no," Zane said. "They're not all physicists, true, but we must assume some basic level of intelligence among

"The Soviets don't feel as threatened by the systems as much as by the fact that they're going to have to respond."

A Star Wars system could add up to $1 trillion to the existing military budget. There is no political support for such an expenditure, he said.

"The people want cuts in the defense budget and not in social programs, ...including student loans," he said. "How do you win in an arms race?"

Makis Gounaris, a freshman finance major, lamented the cost of a space-based anti-ballistic missile system.

"It's ridiculous as long as there are still people starving in this country and there are continuing problems with the homeless, drugs and illiteracy," he said.

business actions."

Mary King, a student loan officer at First Interstate Bank of Nevada, said the results of the needs test often upset students seeking loans.

"I average 10 calls a day from desperate students angry because they did not get any money because of the new needs analysis test," King said. "They don't understand that I didn't have anything to do with making that decision."

Although the number of students qualifying for GSLs is going to decrease, the amount of money that will be available per student is on the increase. The limit an underclassman can borrow has increased from $2,500 to $2,625 per year.

"We will probably have fewer borrowers and borrowers borrowing more," Benson said.

The 47 percent decrease in the GSL program that the Reagan administration is planning could mean a $1,784,000 reduction in the $3,800,000 GSL program at UNR, estimating from last year's figures.

The recently proposed cuts may be a beginning to an end for the GSL program, which could come in the form of a newly-proposed program called the Income Contingent Loan program.

This program, outlined by the government at the beginning of the year, offers higher loan limits, no set time limit on repayment and repayment based upon the recipients' income after college graduation.

But the ICL program is still untested and problems could arise such as defining a graduate's income and recipient income verification. The program also requires students to pay full-interest charges.

"It's only in the planning stages, and it might never go through," Benson said.

A $5 million pilot study project involving 10 schools was recently approved by Congress.

Although the Reagan administration has planned a $1.1 billion cut in the Pell Grant program, Benson says it is still too early to tell what the future situation of that program will be.

The cuts could mean a reduction of $341,215 from a budget of $1,176,605 at UNR, according to 1985-86 Pell Grant figures.

Pell Grants now provide more than $3 billion in aid to nearly three million students enrolled in postsecondary education.

According to Benson, the College Work Study program could suffer a cut of almost $20,000 at UNR. During 1985-86, the program which is 80 percent federally funded, had a total of 237 participants at UNR. The remaining 20 percent of the funding comes from the institution (UNR).

"He is proposing total elimination of the College Work Study program, but there is too much support for that program," Benson said.

The administration hopes to eventually eliminate the National Direct Student Loan program — now called the Perkin's loan program. This program charges no interest while students are in school but charges five percent interest after graduation. This program benefits the most needy students.

"They're trying to take money away from campus based programs and put it into the ICL program," Benson said.

According to Crowley, whatever the future of federally-subsidized student financial assistance is, it remains a necessity in postsecondary education.

"My view is that the program should be enriched," Crowley said. "I continue to think that the best investments are in the areas of education, in particular financial

Student to work on governor's task force

By Rhonda Nourigat

Chris DeRicco, a UNR criminal justice student, will be sworn in on April 10 by police commissioner Vincent Sweeny as a member of the Governor's Task Force on Drinking and Driving.

DeRicco was the only member chosen by Governor Bryan from among 27 others across the state.

"I was really excited when I found out," DeRicco said. "The task force will be looking at many different areas dealing with the abuse of drinking and driving and working on ways to combat the problem.

"We'll also be looking at legislation on DUIs, the judicial system and what changes need to be made," DeRicco said. "I'll have a lot of bills and agendas to read to prepare for this."

A junior at UNR, DeRicco said he has experienced his share of parties but is very serious when he says he doesn't drink and drive.

"I party on the weekends but we always have someone do the driving who hasn't been drinking," he said. "When I was in high school, I was involved in the Saferide program and put in a lot of hours for the organization.

"I even used the program a couple of times."

aid to the students."

King added that the cuts also will have an effect on future generation of students.

"It just comes down to who yells the loudest," King said. "Students should be concerned, because 20 years from now their kids are going to grow up and are going to college."

Meanwhile, students are depending more than ever on aid.

"I took out $7,000 this year — one quarter of my schooling costs," said Alan Larsen, a medical student at UNR. "Without federal aid I would owe $80,000 after graduation."

Reasons lacking in Jowett attack

Editor:

Anyone who is prepared to evaluate in print a serious and recognized scholar in terms such as "campus jester," "delectantish charlatanism," "infantile doggerel," etc., should not be surprised by the "strident" language greeting his attitude. I say attitude, because nothing more is to be detected either in Mr. Jowett's original letter or in his new piece (Sagebrush, March 20, p. 5). I still don't see why the fact that "the great majority of classical texts read by American students have their origin, in translation and criticism, in Britain" invalidates Mr. Bloom's claim that German scholars and philosophers have influenced (for better or worse) our view of Greek antiquity. Also, I do not know whether Joseph Goebbels would be credited with holding "a powerful and carefully argued view;" but it would have been nice to hear at least one reason — as opposed to invectives — for Mr. Jowett's haughty dismissal of Mr. Bloom's philosophical position. And reasons, I am afraid, were sadly lacking in Mr. Jowett's attack.

I find it gratifying to learn that "the elderly woman seated next" to Mr. Jowett was sympathetic to the tone and to the content of Mr. Bloom's lecture. We at the Philosophy Department try to invite speakers capable of appealing to a broad cross-section of the public; and I am sure that President Crowley — to whom Mr. Jowett seems to be recommending us — appreciates our efforts in this matter. It is true that by implementing this policy we run the risk of imposing a degree of unhappiness upon some sophisticates who are generous enough to reward us with their presence in the audience. But then they can always improve their mood by visiting Harrah's Headliner Room...

'Night of All Nations' is a big success

"Love in any language, straight from the heart/Pulls us all together, never apart/ Once we learn to speak it, all the world will hear/ Love in any language, fluently spoken here."

— Sandi Patti

By Steve Mashni

There is standing room only tonight in the Pine Room of the Jot Travis Union.

People from all over the world are here for the Fourth Annual Night Of All Nations celebration.

Sponsored by UNR's International Club, the event brings together the music, dance and culture of 15 countries on four continents of the world.

The first part of the program was a fashion show. The hostess was Mehrnoosh Khaniani, who is also president of the International Club.

Costumes for Iran, India, Bangladesh, Mexico, Finland and several other countries were modeled.

The colorful han bok from Korea was modeled by several people, including a family that charmed the audience.

The final fashion presentation was the panorama from India.

Dr. K.B. Rao of the Counseling, Advisement and Retention Programs hosted this segment which featured the attire of different regions and social classes of India.

The Sierra Repertory Dance Theatre did a Russian folk dance called the "boulba." There were also several other dances from India, Iran and Tawain.

The all-male Hong Kong Student Association then demonstrated their skill in kung fu. The audience was aroused and

Jones Visitor Center brings notice to UNR

By Brett Pauly

As you walk into the Jones Visitor Center, adjacent to Ross Hall on the UNR campus, you will notice four poster-size color prints that flank the entrance to the gallery within. The photographs depict an open market scene in Peru and is part of the current exhibit that is showing at the center entitled "Hispanic Artists: A Cultural Heritage."

The exhibit gives one a revealing look at the Hispanic culture through the work of local artists and the artifacts donated to the month long show by collectors in the community.

The four photos show the hard faces of poverty stricken children while their parents try to sell wares and produce in the street. A child is shown in one photo propped up against a stone pillar biting on a discarded zipper that is held up by his two worn and weathered hands.

Upon passing the guest book podium in the entrance hall, you come into a well-sometimes startled by their kicks, flips, rolls and some body slams against the hardwood floor.

More than anything, though, this was a music event.

Ray Gude, the International Club advisor, began by singing a humorous Irish folk song.

He was then joined by his bluegrass band, an auto harp and a guitar. Their harmonies and rhythms had the audience clapping and singing along with them.

Other musical highlights were Weiru, from Tawain and Uni, from Korea. They both sang contemporary music from their homelands.

A group of UNR students who are members of the New Hope Covenant Church then presented a hard-hitting gospel music show.

International Club secretary Loren Schmidt said he was glad to see outside groups participating this year. He added that he hopes that next year other national groups on campus will become involved in the club.

The audience included several faculty members, students and members of the community.

Hilliard delivers top cats to UNR

By Andy Chapman

The Hilliard Fund is committed to bringing the humanities to UNR, according to Hilliard Committee chairman Bob Plesse.

Plesse said he believes the program is important to the faculty, the students and the Reno area.

"It's really great for the committee and myself to bring these kinds of people to UNR," Plesse said.

The Hilliard Fund was established in 1970 at the bequest of Emily Hilliard, wife of former UNS Regent Albert E. Hilliard.

The fund was to be used to bring prominent people in the humanities field to UNR, to sit in the Hilliard Distinguished Chair in the Humanities.

According to Blesse, the only stipulation in Emily Hilliard's will was that the fund be used for the humanities.

A committee was set up to help find people who would be interested in coming to UNR and lecture in the area of

Keystone Cinema needs help, owners say

By Rick Hoover

The Keystone Cinema is a place many people are familiar with only because they went there to see a movie required by their sociology professor.

Others know it as a theater that shows non-mainstream films.

I fondly remember it as the building where I saw "Attack of the Killer Tomatoes" blind drunk.

However you remember it, the Keystone Cinema now needs your help.

"The beginning of this year was the slowest in our history," Lyndy Mercer, who with husband Lee owns the cinema, said. "A lot has to do with the movies.

"We're not drawing as many people as we'd like. None of the movies have been blockbusters.

Foreign and art type theaters have their own blockbusters."

The Keystone has been known for its benefits in support of community groups. Now, it is having a benefit for itself.

The benefit will take place at the Keystone Cinema April 4 at 7:30 p.m. The cinema will be showing "Malcolm," which, among other honors, was awarded Best Picture at the Australian Film Institute Awards.

Ticket prices are $20 for adults, $15 for students and $10 for seniors.

"We're hoping to get a response — donations of food, drinks, advertising, promotion — anything, basically," Mercer said. "We have 10,000 people on our mailing list.

"They should be getting their flyers soon."

Scott Rader is one of the people on the mailing list.

"It (the cinema) is the only place in town which plays what's not just your standard Hollywood film," Rader said. "It pulls in some very small producer's films that would not be economically feasible for the larger cinemas."

Karen Strating, a UNR junior majoring in business, supports the Keystone for the same reasons: "I like it first of all because they play alternative movies. I think that Reno is definitely lacking in culture."

Strating said she felt that benefit is a good idea.

"We should do anything to keep it open," she said. "They (the Mercers) keep the theater nice and clean. And they really cater to the students. I think it's a great theater."

Barbara Ashley is also a supporter of the Keystone.

"They show movies that aren't shown in other theaters in town — things you can't ordinarily see," Ashley said.

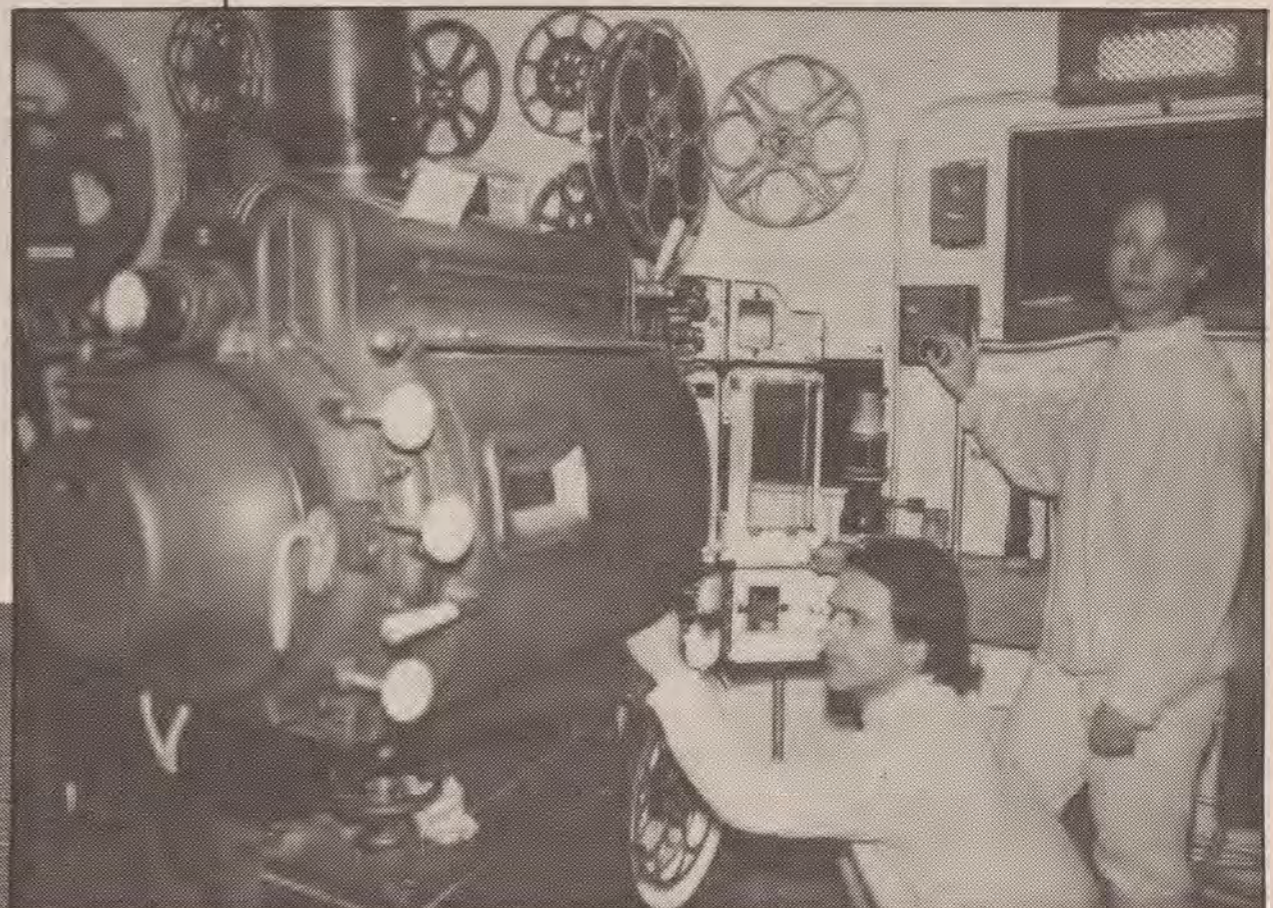

Ashley, who works at UNR's Getchell Library, said she thought the Keystone deserved to have its own benefit: "They've helped a lot of groups in the area. I just think they (the Mercers) are an asset to the

A plea to keep culture in Reno

By Rick Hoover

There is one reason in particular to save the Keystone.

At the moment, it is the only theater in town that shows "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" with any kind of regularity — alternate Fridays.

I consider seeing this movie as an integral part of growing up, just as much as getting blown off by girls and trashing every car I have ever owned.

And I think every other bored youth in this city should have the chance to experience this show in the coming years.

So, if you are tired of Sylvester Stallone, the Keystone Cinema is where you want to be.

As it says on the Keystone flyer: "The cinema you save may be your own."

Save the Keystone special

After five years of presenting some of the finest cinema and benefits for many community and arts groups, the Keystone Cinema is now in dire straits financially. To help, April 4 has been set aside for a private "friends of the Keystone" screening of the award-winning comedy "Malcolm." Show time is 7 p.m.

organized, well-lighted gallery with paintings and glass display cases surrounding a central sitting area.

The gallery is surprisingly quiet and relaxing despite the presence of important working areas that are also inside the center.

The offices of Career Planning and Placement, Public Information and Outreach Services all share the space within the Jones Visitor Center with the gallery, yet this bustle of activity does not seem to disrupt the arty atmosphere.

The materials displayed in the exhibit were collected and organized by the Nevada Hispanic Services under the coordination of Linda Valle.

The exhibit includes mannequins modeling a hand-made sweater from Peru, and a hand-embroidered blouse with skirt of hand-made native cloth from Guatemala.

A Toltec funerary mask from Mexico and fertility sculptures, bowls and plates from Chile appear in the display cases.

Other artifacts of note are a Michoacan wooden oval tray, a clay pot and a wooden "chintas" doll from El Salvador

Expert on nuclear waste at meeting

Citizen Alert will hold its annual public meeting on Friday at 7 p.m. in the Alumni Lounge of JTU.

The featured speaker will be Don Hancock, staff expert on nuclear waste for the Southwest Research and Information Center in Albuquerque, N.M., and founding member of the National Nuclear Waste Task Force, a coalition of over 1,200 grassroots groups throughout the country working on nuclear waste issues.

Hancock will speak on the technical and a beautiful silver necklace from Guatemala.

The collection wouldn't be complete without the maracas and guiro, musical instruments native to Mexico.

The exhibit abounds with color from these artifacts collected from south of the border.

The paintings of local artist Esteban Valle, originally from Nicaragua, dominate the wall space.

Valle's paintings depict commonplace working activities, in places where there is no automation and travel is by donkey on backstreets and alleys. There is a certain photographic quality to his work.

His paintings are very detailed in areas and just simply sketched outlines in other parts, but this combination of seemingly opposite painting techniques complements the work as a whole.

Paintings by two other local Hispanic artists, Leonor Emmons and Giraldo Fernandez, who is originally from Cuba, are also on display.

The exhibit provides the viewer with a real sampling of the Hispanic culture.

The exhibit will run through March 27, and gallery hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

The overall aim behind the gallery is in keeping with the namesake of the building in which it is housed: to motivate the public to visit the UNR campus.

"The purpose of the Gallery is to bring the community to the campus, that means having artists from the community and guests from the community," says Anne Stewart, publications writer for the Office of Public Information.

Next month's exhibit is entitled "Rebirth." The exhibit will feature a collaboration of art works by a group of local artists who call themselves "Connections."

BACCHUS: Don't drink to excess for good time

By Wendy Westergard

Drinking excessive amounts of alcohol is not a prerequisite to having a good time, according to a UNR organization which is planning events this semester to promote this message.

Amy Clark, president of BACCHUS (Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students), said the organization will focus on speakers and panels to promote alcohol awareness.

BACCHUS is planning to ask corporations, and probably even a beer company, to help fund these programs, Clark said.

According to Nanette Dory, vice president of BACCHUS, the group is hoping to establish a designated driver program with some of the bars near campus in order to discourage driving under the influence.

Designated drivers would receive a free non-alcoholic drink after presenting a designated driver card.

BACCHUS members don't think drinking is wrong, Dory said.

"We'd be hypocrites if we said we didn't drink," she said. "We're just saying

(you should) have two drinks instead of 10."

Mia Keating, a member of BACCHUS, agreed.

"We're just sick of seeing people get hurt," Keating said.

Since the UNR chapter of BACCHUS received its charter last semester, the group has focused on increasing its membership, Clark said.

BACCHUS member John Schlegelmilch is concerned about getting more membership.

"I think people are hesitant about BACCHUS because they think it's an anti-alcohol thing," he said.

But according to another BACCHUS member, Larry Rosborough: "BACCHUS is good, BACCHUS is cool. If you don't join BACCHUS, you be a fool."

their expertise.

In 1976, the first occupant of the chair was Sven Liljeblad of Sweden's Uppsala University. Liljeblad held the chair for seven years.

After Liljeblad resigned, the committee decided to change its format.

According to Blesse, the committee decided that instead of one person for a long period of time, it would get more people for shorter periods of time.

"We are looking forward to bringing new people to UNR," Blesse said.

Blesse added he believes it is important that the chair interacts with the faculty and the students.

"The chair is very important in the aspect of talking to the classes," Blesse said. "They can have a great impact on us all."

The latest occupant of the chair was Dr. Christine Cassel, chief of internal medicine at the University of Chicago's Pritzker School of Medicine.

Dr. Cassel was in Reno for five days to work with the faculty, the students and the community on interdisciplinary issues.

The next scheduled occupant is Paul H. Smith, editor of the multi-volume "Letters of the Delegates to Congress, 1774-1789."

Smith will be assisting UNR in its celebration of the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

According to Blesse, the Hilliard Committee will search for the most interesting projects connected with distinguished people in this country or abroad. Blesse added that proposals are always welcome and can be made to any member of the committee.

5 UNR boxers to compete in national college tournament

By Geoff Schumacher

UNR will be the major representative from the West at the National Collegiate Boxing Tournament April 3-4 at the Old Gym.

The boxing club will send five boxers to the national tournament: sophomore Lenny Chavez (125 pounds), senior Steve Freed (139 pounds), freshman Gary McCoy (147 pounds), junior Dave Freed (165 pounds) and senior Mark Duncan (190 pounds).

The Freed brothers both won silver medals for UNR at last year's national championships.

UNR, which took third place last year, had hoped to have six boxers in the national competition, but sophomore Tobin Rupert lost a split decision to Cal Berkeley's David Cassety in the 132-pound division of the West Coast Boxing Association regional tournament Friday at Berkeley, Calif.

"I don't think Tobin lost the fight," UNR coach Pat Schellin said. "He had the flu and was in bed for two days before the fight. But it was very close.

"Cassety is a tough fighter and is a good representative for the West, but I feel bad for Tobin because he works so hard."

Rupert, from Carson City, won a bronze medal at nationals last year.

UNR sophomore Wayne Vanderwal won a 156-pound fight Friday, but is in the novice division so he didn't qualify for nationals.

Cal Berkeley will send four boxers from the West to the national tournament to round out the nine collegiate weight divisions. Santa Clara, another western team, won't be represented at the tournament.

The national tournament also will include representatives from the East, Midwest and Central regions.

Perennial powerhouses are the Air Force Academy (defending champs), Virginia Military Institute, Army (West Point), Navy (Annapolis), and The Citadel.

Intramural basketball tournament to start Thursday at Lombardi Rec

By Geoff Schumacher

It's tournament time of another kind this week at Lombardi Recreation Center.

The North Carolinas, Indianas and UNLVs of a slightly lower caliber will match up in the intramural men's basketball tournament, starting Thursday night.

The regular season ends tonight and a tournament schedule should be posted by Wednesday morning, according to Dave Hoover, assistant intramural director.

Hoover said the single-elimination tournament, which he expects to include 32 teams, will take about two weeks to conclude.

Hoover's pick to win the tournament is the Running Smurfs, a team that features UNR high jumper Mark Trujillo and Wolf Pack outfielder Rob Richie.

Last year's champion, Scoring Unlimited, has split up so it can't defend its intramural title. The players from that team are on other teams, however, he said.

Demetrius Davis and Tony Logan, both UNR football players, are former Scoring Unlimited players who now play on the Scorpions, a team which has a good chance of winning the tournament, Hoover said.

Other teams Hoover cited as possible title contenders are the fast-breaking Old-timers and fraternity-league champ Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

The walleyball championship game will be played Thursday at 3 p.m. on Court 9.

Intramural walleyball is "volleyball on a squash court," Hoover explained.

UNR track team can't get a break on weather

By Geoff Schumacher

Three UNR athletes took first place at the Sacramento State Invitational track and field meet Saturday under less-than-ideal conditions.

Coach Jack Cook said only 14 members of his team competed in the meet so UNR wasn't counted in the team scoring.

He said he gave the team the option whether to go to the meet or stay home because of the poor conditions.

"The weather wasn't the best," Cook said. "We've been to three meets this season and haven't had a good day yet. It's been terrible. So 14 decided to go and 14 decided to stay."

Cal Berkeley won the meet, Weber State was second, San Jose State was third and Sacramento State was fourth.

UNR junior Mike Nishanian won the shot put with a heave of 54 feet, 10 1/2 inches. It was Nishanian's third straight victory and his best throw of the season, although much shorter than his best ever.

"This is just the beginning of the season," Cook said. "You can't just pick up where you left off last season. It's going to take him until tournament time to get back."

Junior Fred Houston placed third in the shot put with a heave of 51-10.

Mark O'Conner, a junior from Dublin, Ireland, won the javelin with a throw of 212-9. It was a season best for O'Conner, the defending Big Sky champion.

But O'Conner's toss also was far short of his 222-9 mark at the Big Sky meet last year.

"He is stronger than last year but he just needs to perfect his technique and let everything fall into place," Cook said.

Another junior, Bernard Chatman, won the 200 meters in 21.2 seconds, his lifetime best. Chatman transferred this semester from Skyline Junior College in California.

Sheldon Griffith took fourth in the 200 in 22.1. Griffith is a recent transfer to UNR from San Jose City College.

Chatman was second in the 400 meters in 47.5 seconds and freshman Jack Robb of Reno was fifth in the 800 in 1:56.

Mark Trujillo of Reno failed to make the opening height in the high jump.

"Mark doesn't know what happened to himself," Cook said. "He had to wait four hours to jump and probably couldn't get mentally prepared. It was awfully cold waiting out there."

UNR's next meet will be the Stanford Relays Friday and Saturday in Palo Alto, Calif. Cook said he expects 25 teams to compete at the Stanford meet.

Women's track rained out

The UNR women's track team didn't participate in the Meet of Champions competition at Cal Berkeley Saturday because it was too cold and rainy, coach Tony Melody said.

The team's next meet will be the Woody Wilson Relays at Cal Davis April 11.

Although distance runner Patty Young has been bothered by nagging illnesses, she is expected to compete in the Cal Davis meet, Melody said. Young took second place at the West Coast Athletic Conference cross country this fall.

Also, UNR has a new addition to the team in Kelly Lepori, a triple jumper/hurdler from Reed High School.

Make the big bucks! Join the betting pool

Office pools can be great entertainment.

The Sagebrush recently got in on the excitement with a pool for the NCAA Basketball Tournament.

We had 10 people who each chipped in a dollar and then filled in a tournament bracket with the progression of teams that they thought would reach the Final Four.

The pool serves two purposes.

First, the winner can get enough money to buy a new album or a case o' beer. As it stands, with only four teams remaining, I am in the lead with 42 correct answers.

That means the new U2 album may be in order. If I don't win it all, the case o' beer may be the purchased item. I just have a feeling.

Second, the pool creates added interest in the tournament. The entrants can root for their favorite teams and celebrate when the upsets they predicted come true.

For example, entrant John Trent picked Providence to reach the Final Four.

Who would have thought it? Nobody else in the pool had such a prediction so Trent is now basking in his glory. (And is tied for second place in the pool with 41 correct answers.)

Another example, but of a different sort: entrant Bryan Allison picked BYU to reach the Final Four.

Who would have thought it? Nobody else in the pool, with good sense. But it was good for a laugh.

I successfully picked two of the Final Four teams: UNLV and Indiana. Unfortunately, I also picked Georgetown and Notre Dame to make it this far.

Granted, Notre Dame was a longshot (but a good one with all its upsets this season). But Georgetown seemed a sure thing.

Oh well. It's all for fun when it comes down to it. Ten bucks isn't exactly a figure worth laboring on and on about.

That was especially true in entrant Brett Pauly's case. Pauly has done the worst of anybody with only 27 correct answers.

Brett's bets for the Final Four were UNLV (sensible), Missouri, Kansas and Middle Tennessee State.

Middle Tennessee seemed to be an outrageous pick, but then so was Providence.

Look where the Friars are now.

Pack women drop 2 at UNR home courts

By Geoff Schumacher

The UNR women's tennis team lost to both Montana and the University of Denver Sunday at the UNR courts after defeating Boise State Thursday and Sonoma State Friday.

UNR lost 8-1 to both Montana and Denver with junior Anne Meyer and freshman Jennifer Sherrill taking the only UNR victories on the day.

"We could have done better," coach Betty Mantz said. "But we lost some key matches in three sets."

Mantz said both of UNR's opponents Sunday were strong but beatable.

"They weren't as good as the score came out to be," she said. "Our girls played pretty well but the other teams were a little bit stronger."

The Pack blanked Boise State 8-0 Thursday at the UNR courts.

In singles matches, junior Karen

Meyer defeated Teri Croson 6-1, 6-3, Anne Meyer defeated Cindy Doan 6-0, 6-3, and sophomore Susan Campbell defeated Sheri Johnson 6-3, 6-3.

Senior Kathy Leonard defeated Jill Brenton 6-3, 6-3, junior Meghan Miller defeated Katie Lyons 7-5, 6-3, and sophomore Sheri Gerech defeated Audra Eaton 6-2, 6-0.

In doubles matches, Meyer-Meyer defeated Croson-Johnson 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, and Campbell-Leonard defeated Doan-Brinton 6-1, 6-3.

UNR defeated Sonoma State 8-1 Friday.

In singles matches, Karen Meyer defeated Jenny Borg 7-5, 6-1, Anne Meyer defeated Susan Dressing 6-2, 4-6, 6-4, and Campbell lost to Deborah Root 2-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Men's tennis team destroys S.F. State, loses to Boise

By Geoff Schumacher

The UNR men's tennis team got a strong performance from the lower half of its lineup Saturday against Big Sky-rival Boise State but it wasn't enough to pull out a victory.

Boise State defeated UNR 5-4 in singles and doubles matches at Reno's Lakeridge Tennis Club.

"The teams were closely matched," UNR coach Bill Victor said. "As far as ability is concerned, they couldn't have been closer."

UNR's record fell to 3-7 overall and 0-1 in the Big Sky.

In singles matches, UNR sophomore Gavin MacMillan lost to Lee Galway, a product of New Zealand, 7-5, 6-0, junior Matt McDonald lost to Dave Tibbetts 7-6, 6-2, and freshman John Freudenberger defeated Tim Crist 7-5, 5-7, 6-0.

UNR sophomore Brian Scanlon defeated Maurice Vasconcellos 7-6, 7-5, freshman Craig Brown defeated Dave Harmel 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, and freshman Gumer Mendez defeated Mike Harvey 6-4, 6-4.

UNR took a 4-2 advantage going into the doubles competition and needing just one victory to win the team title.

"We only had to win one doubles and we just couldn't put it together," Victor, in his first year as coach, said. "I think the Boise players were better volleyers."

UNR baseball team on 3-game slide

The UNR baseball team dropped a pair of West Coast Athletic Conference games at San Diego last weekend.

The Wolf Pack, which has lost three games in a row, lost 12-8 Friday and 7-6 Saturday to bring its record to 12-12-1.

In Saturday's game, San Diego's three runs in the fifth made the difference.

Junior John Walsh got the loss for UNR after relieving Jeff Barry.

"We just couldn't hold the leads our batters got for us," UNR coach Gary Powers said. "We couldn't keep them from coming back."

All-American Rob Richie hit two triples and Sam Thomas went 2 for 3 with a fourth-inning two-run home run.

In Friday's game, the Pack led 8-4 after seven innings but fell apart in the eighth as the Toreros scored eight runs.

UNR senior left-hander Mark Titchener walked the first hitter in the eighth and was relieved by John Barton, who in turn walked the next two to load the bases.

Barton, a junior transfer from Laney College, proceeded to give up two singles and then a triple by David Rolls that cleared the bases.

UNR had 17 hits in the game, including three by Richie, who hit his seventh home run of the season.

Thomas, a catcher, went 4 for 4 in the game. Freshman Rob Sharp, who went 3 for 5, also hit a home run for UNR.

Lambda Chi Alpha takes intramural skiing

Reidar Brekke, a UNR golfer from Nye Hall, won the intramural ski meet Saturday with a time of 24.41 in the giant slalom and Lambda Chi Alpha won the team competition with 30 points.

Thirteen students from four organizations participated in the annual meet at Slide Mountain.

Nye Hall placed second with 23 points, Sigma Nu was third with 22 points and Sigma Alpha Epsilon was fourth with 13 points.

In the individual standings, Dave Miller of Lambda Chi was second with a 24.3, Mark Gamroth of Lambda Chi was third in 25.74 and Mimi Walker of Nye
